AS COOLIDGE must face the issue of a third term at an early date. He will be asked to state his views on that question, as Governor Smith did concerning Catholicism."

You read that from Washington, but it is not accurate.

AS FOR Mr. Coolidge "facing the issue of a third term," there is no such issue.

George Washington was elected President once, twice, and could have allowed himself to be nominated and elected a third term and a fourth term, but he felt that such a program might lead to restoring monarchy, which he had recently eliminated.

THERE is no reason why Governor Smith should have answered more or less impertinent questions about his religion unless he chose to do so. He answered ably. A sufficient answer would have been:

"My religion is none of anybody's business. If you doubt that, read the Constitution of the United States."

BACK BAY RESTAURANT MANAGER GAVE LIFE TO SAVE EMPLOYER'S CASH

Feodor Chychuk, 55-year-old night manager of the Puritan Lunch at No. 280 Huntington avenue, was murdered as he defended his employer's money, ashed in an ice-chest in the cellar of the restaurant, early today.

The murderers, though they reaped some $58 as the price of their crime, overlooked going through the pockets of the victim, and thereby lost $204 additional loot.

Police began a check-up of former employes and centered their efforts on a search for one man. According to other employes, this man was well acquainted with the workings of the funchroom and the hiding place of the night receipts.

Chychuk's body was discovered by Edward F. McGrath, a milkman, who found the back door of the lunchroom open when he made his rounds this morning. He saw Chychuk lying at the foot of the cellar stairs, and immediately called the Back Bay police station.

The body was taken to the City Hospital, where it was found that two bullets had taken effect, one causing death, just above the heart, the other in his lip.

Police believe the man was shot down soon after 1 o'clock, as he had done none of his work about the place, but as the body was still warm when it reached the hospital, the

SNYDER JURORS HEAR 'CONFESSION' OF WIDOW

Long Island City, N. Y., April 26 (A.P.)—Testifying today at the Snyder murder trial, former Police Commissioner George V. McLaughlin of New York said he was told by Henry Judd Gray, one of the defendants, that Mrs. Snyder had attempted to kill her art editor husband, Albert Snyder, six times before he decided to "help her" in the alleged act.

Witness also quoted Gray as saying that when he struck Snyder the victim grabbed him and he dropped the sash weight. Mrs. Snyder picked it up. Gray was quoted as saying, and beat her husband until he lay still.

Immediately after the noon recess, District Attorney Newcombe read Mrs. Snyder's confession, Justice Seudder having overruled objections by defense counsel. Mrs. Snyder

DAVIS KILLED IN TEST OF N. Y. TO PARIS PLANE

Newport News, Va., April 26 (A.P.)—Members of the crew which wrecated the bodies of Lieutenant-Commander Noel Davis and Lieutenant S. H. Wooster from the wreckage of their plane, "American Legion," today, said Davis' face had been crushed and that the lieutenant's neck was broken.

Commander Noel Davis, who was preparing for a New York-Paris transatlantic flight, and Lieutenant Baton H. Wooster, his alternate pilot, were killed today when their navy plane, the American Legion, crashed near Messick, Va. Mrs. Snyder Pales as Confession Is Read

Long Island City, N. Y., April 26 (I.N.S.).—Ruth Brown Snyder's confession that she helped her suitor, Henry Judd Gray, murder her husband, Albert, early in the morning of March 20, 1927, was read to the Snyder murder case jury today by District Attorney Richard S. Newcombe.

The statement was made at the office of the district attorney on March 11, the day after Snyder was beaten on the head with an iron weight, chloroformed and picture wire tied around his neck, the confession said.

"My name is Ruth May Snyder, and I want to make a full and truthful statement about the death of my husband, Albert," Newcombe read from the confession. "I reside at 9321 222nd street, Queens Village and I will be thirty-two years of age on Sunday, March 27, 1927.

"I began having difficulty with my husband almost immediately after our marriage. I was apparently too giddy and young for his years. While he was only 33 at the time he was like a man of 50 to me. He was not companionable.

"Mr. Gray is American born and lives at East Orange, N. J. He is married and has a daughter of about 10 or 11. I was friendly with him on a number of occasions. We got a room as Mr. and Mrs. Henry Judd Gray the first time at the Imperial Hotel in New York City, during July, 1925. We went to the Imperial a few times and to the Waldorf Astoria.

MADEIROS, IN DEATH CELL, NEAR COLLAPSE

Within the grim shadow of the electric chair, Celestino Madeiros, Wrentham bank robber slayer and strange figure in the Sacco-Vanzetti case, is beginning to break under the strain.

Confined in the death house at Charlestown State Prison, from where he will be led to the electric chair sometime after midnight tomorrow, unless Governor Fuller and his council intervene, Madeiros is near a state of collapse.

Madeiros is spending his few remaining hours in aimless fashion in an orderly manner.

CUT LEVEE TO SAVE CITY IS NEW ORLEANS' PLEA

New Orleans, April 26 (A.P.)—Governor O. H. Simpson was in conference here today with a group of bankers, presumably for the purpose of working out plan, for reimbursing residents of the area that would be affected by creating a crevasse in the levee below New Orleans.

A break in the levees in the neighborhood of Poydras, the scene of the 1922 break, would inundate some fifty miles of farming and trapping lands east of the river below New Orleans.

New Orleans today began in earnest preparations for the flood menace. The city fears heavy loss of life and loss of millions in property when the flood crest arrives.

WIDOW TRIED TO KILL SNYDER SIX TIMES, GRAY TOLD POLICE

listened attentively as the affidavit was read, but Gray rested his chin on one hand and gazed abstractedly at the floor.

Gray took his arrest for the murder as a joke up to the time he was put on a train at Syracuse for New York, according to one of the arresting officers who testified today.

He maintained his innocence until members of the district attorney's staff boarded the train at Albany. He held out even when under questioning, until the train reached Poughkeepsie when he "broke" and admitted the murder.

Police Lieutenant McDermott, one of the two officers who arrested Gray in Syracuse the day after the murder, took the stand and under questioning by counsel for Gray, told details of the arrest.

He said Gray told them that he had been in Syracuse all during the week-end.

Gray was quoted as having given a detailed account of his actions the day before and after the killing, much of which time he said he spent in making business calls and in the company of Haddon Gray, a friend but no relative.

One of the acts he told of during the time he was believed to have been in Queens Village was the mailing of a letter to "Jane Gray" in Queens Village.

The policeman said Gray told him of Haddon Gray and Harry Platt, another friend, calling on him and spending much of the time with him the day after the crime. They had just left him, Gray was quoted as saying, when he was arrested as he was going to bed.

"I asked him," said McDermott, "if he knew Mrs. Snyder and he said yes, but he hadn't seen her since the second week in February."

The killing of Snyder was on March 20.

McDermott acknowledged that Gray showed no consciousness of guilt while he was kept in Syracuse and only "broke" when the train on which he was being taken to New York reached Poughkeepsie.

"Lieutenant Brown and I took him on the train," McDermott said, "and at that time he was still taking it all as a joke.

"At Albany three members of the district attorney's office boarded the train and entered our stateroom."

"And all five of you threw questions at your prisoner continuously?" Gray's lawyer asked.

How Gray Finally 'Broke'

"I didn't say 'threw,' but we questioned him."

Q.—And as the train reached Poughkeepsie he "broke," or would you? A.—Yes, it was at that time I confessed.

When Gray finally confessed to the murder he was alert, untired in appearance and under no compulsion, the lieutenant said.

The defense in the trial contends that the "confessions" of both Gray and Mrs. Snyder were gotten as the result of "mental third degree."

The jury today filed in just before 10 o'clock, and Justice Scudder, presiding, took the bench as the defendants were brought in by prison attendants.

Confession of Snyder Widow Read to Jury and I was looking for a way out. In talking with Mr. Gray a method was proposed whereby we were talking about getting rid of him.

Feared for Own Life

"Finally things came to a climax. About two or three weeks ago I had another argument with my husband and he said he was going to blow my brains out. I wrote this to Mr. Gray. I wrote back to Mr. Gray after he had asked me in the letter whether I thought my husband would do it or not, that I certainly thought he would do anything in a fit of temper because he had an awful temper.

"Mr. Gray wrote back to me in a code which only we two understand, that it was better for Mr. Gray and I to get him (my husband) before he got me.

"We discussed various ways of getting rid of my husband. We had talked about chloroform, but Mr. Gray said he didn't know if that would be sufficient alone.

"I met him on March 5, 1927, and he told me to take home a window weight. In case we were going to do anything that was the way we were going to do it. I took home this window weight.

Denies Any "Third Degree"

"In the district attorney's office," McDermott continued, "Gray was asked if he wanted to make a formal confession and he said he did. A stenographer was called in, the confession was reduced to writing and he signed it. He also identified the implements used in the murder."

Q.—He didn't ask to have counsel present? A.—No.

Q.—Do you know what the third degree is? A.—I know what people put on the police force mean by it.

A.—Tor of course don't know it from experience? A.—No.

Q.—Can you say that the way Gray was questioned was not the third degree? A.—I can say that it was not.

Police Lieutenant Charles Dorschell, who was being questioned when court was adjourned last night, was called to the stand.

He identified a diagram of certain streets in Kingston, N. Y., which he said Gray made after his arrest to show where he bought the sash weight, picture wire and chloroform with which Snyder was beaten, strangled and anaesthetized to death.

"Cried Like Babies"

"Mr. Gray came to my house—March 5, I think he came out with the purpose of getting rid of my husband. It was understood between us that he was to hit my husband on the head with this window weight and stun him after he had gotten to sleep and then administer chloroform to him; but Mr. Gray and I both got cold feet that night. The two of us cried like babies and I said to him, 'go on home, you're not going to do it.'

"On Saturday, March 19th, myself and my husband and daughter went to a friend's house named Fidgeon. I made it my business to see that the cellar door and the kitchen door would be unlocked. At the party at Fidgeon's I was careful at first I wouldn't drink too much intoxicating liquor and on one occasion suggested that they give my drink to my husband.

"My husband and daughter and I arrived home about 2 a. m., on Sunday morning, the 20th. My husband left my daughter and I out on the sidewalk. We entered by the front door.

"I took the baby to her room and shut adressed and I put her to bed. Before this as I was passing to the baby's room I saw Mr. Gray in my mother's room and I said, 'I'll see you in a little while.'

"After putting the baby to bed I went into my own room, in which we have two beds, and I got undressed and went to bed. After I had been in bed for about ten minutes my husband went to bed. After about a half-hour, when I was sure he was asleep, I got up and went into my mother's room (her mother was away) and told Mr. Gray my husband was asleep.

"Mr. Gray had the window weight. I had brought the weight up from the cellar that afternoon, all ready for Mr. Gray."

"Mr. Gray and I had arranged "to get a bottle of chloroform and when he went into my mother's room he had the bottle of chloroform. He also had a piece of cheesecloth and cotton waste with him. He had a blue cotton handkerchief and he put the waste in the cotton handkerchief and poured the chloroform on the waste and cotton handkerchief. The original paper that was on the weight when I first received it from Mr. Gray was on it Saturday night.

"I told him it was either my husband or my going. After we had all the details arranged he kissed me and walked into my husband's room.

"There were no lights in the house. He walked from me where I was standing in my mother's bedroom into my own bedroom, and I followed him into the hall. I stood in the hall about three or four feet from my room.

"In the darkness I could see Mr. Gray raise his arm, holding what I believed to be the weight in his hand, and in the darkness the white paper around the weight stood out. I saw this weight in Mr. Gray's hand start to travel and immediately heard a thud.

"My husband groaned twice after I heard the thud. I saw Mr. Gray strike my husband's hands behind his back. I was able to see in the dark because there is a street arc light on the opposite side of the street.

"When Mr. Gray struck my husband he was lying on his left side. He tied his hands behind his back and put the blue handkerchief and the waste with the chloroform on it on the pillow and then turned my husband face down on the pillow so that the waste and blue handkerchief with the chloroform on it would cover his nose and mouth.

"He then covered his head with the blankets to make sure of suffocation.

TWO KILLED IN 'LEGION' PLANE

mander Davis planned to make before taking his machine back to New York to prepare for his attempted non-stop hop from New York to Paris.

Major C. J. Brown of the Army Air Corps, who witnessed the crash, gave this description of the accident:

"The American Legion was taking off for a full load test and it took off on the long runway at Langley Field, to the north. They ran along the ground for a long distance and finally got into the air, but apparently did not rise more than about twenty feet from the ground.

"They crossed Black River beyond the big balloon hangar at Langley Field and apparently figuring that they would not be able to clear the trees, made a right-hand turn to the east.

"The turn being nearly completed, the plane sank and crashed into the marsh on the north side of Black River. The left wing of the plane was completely demolished and the fuselage was buried in the mud back to the pilot's cockpit."

Commander Davis had an unusual and brilliant record in the navy. He was raised on the plains of Utah and in his early school days evidenced a penchant for mathematics and the navy, with the result that friends induced him to enter the Naval Academy at Annapolis. He did and was graduated with high honors, notwithstanding his early educational handicaps.

DOCTOR DIES IN BATHTUB

Dr. Harry P. Fink, aged 31, with offices on Bay State road, was drowned accidentally in the bathtub at the home of his parents, No. 240 Winchester street, Brookline, shortly after noon today.

His mother entered the bathroom after returning from a trip to the grocery store shortly after noon and found the physician lying face down in the bathtub, dead.

The Brookline police were summoned and a pulmotor used, but efforts to restore respiration were in vain. Associate Medical Examiner Hayes announced the drowning was accidental.

nist, answered to their names when the case was called and while Asst. Dist. Atty. Warren L. Bishop sat at his table the defense counsel gathered at the bench for a conference with Judge Dillon.

The conference ceased when Bishop grew indignant and asked if he might not hear what was going on. Then while a score of Cambridge policemen, called as witnesses and some of them as spectators looked on, defense counsel and the Harvard "riot" eleven trouped from the courtroom for a corridor conference.

A few minutes later the defendants came back and defense counsel filed solemnly after. The order was given to proceed and the pleas of nolo were then made.

"These pleas of nolo are plainly strategy," shouted the assistant district attorney as he asked the court not to allow the pleas. Judge Dillon asked if he meant that any of the defendants had previous records. He answered no and the court then accepted the pleas, at the same time ordering the men to pay the fines imposed in lower court.

ACCUSED EACH OTHER.

Thus ended the aftermath of a midnight battle in Harvard square, Feb. 12, when police and students fought with fists, eggs and clubs. The police charged the students started the battle. The students charged the police started the club swinging with little provocation.

In all there were more than 80 Harvard students arrested, many of them with wounds of battle showing. All except the 11 in court today were discharged in lower court.

Superior strategy won for Harvard, according to Asst. Dist. Atty. Bushnell, who opposed the nolo pleas. The move was a surprise and caught the police and district attorney without preparation. All had expected a bitter legal fight in view of President Lowell's request for the restoration of the patrolmen involved in the riot and the declaration of all concerned that they would fight the charges against them to the limit.

DETERMINED TO FIGHT.

Since that skirmish battle in which town and gown fought it out with casualties on both sides the police have remained adamant in their stand to "go through" and punish the offenders and the Harvard students have indicated that they would fight the charges against them and bring counter charges.

The men in court today, who pleaded nolo, were placed on probation and the fines they had to pay are: William J. Grossman, $30; Samuel Westheimer, alias Daniel Webster, $30; Arthur J. Clements, tobacconist, $20; Edward J. Cunningham, $20; Arthur E. French, football star, $1; Horace W. Fuller, $25; John H. MacCallum, $20; John I. Shaw, $25; Edward H. Steiner, $25; D. Cherbourg, France, April 26.—"The Prince is the greatest love of my life and I am looking forward to the greatest happiness of my life."

Such was the greeting of Pola Negri, famous and beautiful Polish film star, upon her arrival from New York upon the liner Aquitania.

She was referring to Prince Serge Mdivani, to whom she is engaged, and to whom she will be married at her chateau near Paris early in May.

Prince Serge also was a passenger upon the Aquitania.

"My love for the Prince is greater than my love for Rudolph Valentino or for Charles Chaplin," declared the screen star.

"I am a Catholic while Serge is a member of the Church of England. I shall not give up my religion and I do not expect Serge to give up his."

The Prince said he did not expect Pola to give up her career.

MAN, AGED 71, SWINGS AXE ON SON-IN-LAW

Using a hatchet as a weapon, Robert Grant, 71, of Dickson street, West Somerville, police charge, today attacked his son-in-law, Carl Hutchins, 45 as the latter lay asleep in bed.

Hutchins is on the danger list at the Somerville Hospital suffering from cuts about the head and chest, while his father-in-law is held at the Somerville police station on the charge of assault with a dangerous weapon.

The father-in-law made his home with the Hutchins family and the police were unable to learn what motive the man had in attacking his son-in-law.

Hutchins was asleep on the third floor of the house, while his wife, Mrs. Edna Hutchins, who is in ill health, was asleep on the second floor. The fifteen-year-old daughter, Erma, a pupil in the Western Junior High School, was dressed and on the second floor.

Grant stealthily entered the bedroom and leaped on his victim, striking him twice on the head with the hatchet.

After the first blow was struck Hutchins awoke sufficiently to defend himself. Neighbors, hearing the terrified shrieks from the home, notified the police and a squad of officers was rushed to the home in an auto. The victim was taken to the hospital and his assailant was placed under arrest.

If Hutchins survives his injuries he will owe his life to his daughter, Erma. The daughter was dressing on the second floor of the home when her grandfather made the attack on her father in the third floor bedroom. The girl rushed to her father's assistance and aided in subduing the old man.

Hutchins, although badly injured, with the aid of the daughter, finally disarmed Grant and locked him in his room, where he was confined when the police arrived. Hutchins is a theatre manager, while his father-in-law is a retired employe of the Boston Elevated. The Somerville police believe the older man's mind deranged.

Grant was arraigned before Judge M. E. Sturtevant in Somerville District Court on the charge of assault with intent to murder. His case was continued until Monday and bail was set at $20,000. Unable to furnish the bail, the prisoner was removed to the East Cambridge Jail.

8 HARVARD BOYS ARE CHOSEN IN SCREEN TEST

Screen history was in the making at Harvard today.

Four hundred students—haughty seniors—lowly freshmen—sophomores and juniors, thronged the freshman gymnasium in an effort to strut before a movie camera in the hands of an expert from the First National studios in Burbank, Cal.

The "movies" made of eight Harvard students will be studied in the studio of the First National. If the directors deem it worth while, one, two or possibly all eight will be tendered contracts, which lead to an ultimate salary of $750 per week at the end of five years.

The screen trials were a part of a test being carried on by First National in 33 universities of the country. New stars for the screen are sought and it is believed that the colleges and universities of the country furnish the best material.

The eight Harvard students who were selected today were Harry Stanley, '29, of Savannah, Ga.; Harold E. Hertzfeld, '29, of Toledo, O.; John Barnum, '30, of Boston; W. C. Hildack, Jr., '29; Edward P. Renous, '28, Andover; John Barton Olmsted, 2nd, '27, Ludlow, Vt.; Duryea Huntingdon Jones, '28, New York, and John Newton Barbee, Jr., '28, Chicago.

Two Brown students, James Fishback, '30, of Washington, D. C., and John Gagnon, '29, of New London, Ct., journeyed from Providence in an effort to have themselves screened in the test. The students were successful. Along with the eight Harvard students they were photographed.

While only eight Harvard students were selected for the screen tests, John Leroy Johnson, publicity director for First National, was enthusiastic. He said: "Of all the schools we have visited, Harvard has produced the best types."

PICK HARVARD BOYS FOR MOVIES

"SHOOTING" JAMES FISHBACK, BROWN '30
Four hundred students crowded the gym at Harvard today to strut before the camera of the First National Studios of Burbank, Cal., in their endeavor to be considered for a contract, but only eight Harvard and two Brown men were chosen and photographed. These films will be studied by experts. Perhaps all, perhaps none, will get jobs leading to an ultimate salary of $750 a week.

NURSE STOLE PIN, DOLLS

James H. Handren, male nurse, who has been on trial in Middlesex Superior Court charged with the larceny of valuable tapestries, brocades, scarabs and books from the home of Arthur H. Whitney, Watertown paper manufacturer, was found not guilty on most of the larceny counts today and guilty of taking a pin, valued at $1 and a pair of dolls, value $3.

In four counts Handren was charged with larceny of tapestries, which the Whitneys said were very valuable; brocades, also valuable, scarabs, also valuable, books, pin and dolls. The jury in its verdict found him not guilty of taking the books, not guilty of taking the tapestries, scarabs and other art works, guilty of taking the pair of home-made dolls and a pin. Handren was formerly a nurse for Whitney. He was held in $5,000 to await sentence.

PROMINENT AS COOLIDGE, BARKER SAYS OF PATIENT

New York, April 26 (A.P.)—Sir Herbert Barker, one of the leading bloodless surgeons of the world, announced today upon his arrival from Kingston, Jamaica, aboard the liner Escapa, that he comes to perform an operation on a "prominent man," whose name he would not reveal. He described him as being "as prominent as Coolidge."

NOTABLES SEE ADLOW WED

In a bower of palms and southern smilax festooned with lilies and before a distinguished gathering of city officials headed by Mayor Nichols, Miss Jessie Rose Sugarman of the Hotel Buckminster was married today to Attorney Elijah Adlow in the Copley-Plaza state dining room at noon today.

Rabbi Harry Levi of Temple Israel performed the ceremony.

The bride was unattended. Attorney Adlow had as his best man Nathan A. Heller and as ushers Dr. Dave Bloom and B. H. Sugerman, the bride's brother.

Following the ceremony forty-five guests attended a bridal luncheon at a table decorated with butterfly roses and asparagus greens.

The couple left for New York, Atlantic City, Washington and a trip to the West. Temporary residence will be at the Copley Plaza upon their return.

Mrs. Adlow is a great grandniece of Judah Benjamin, who was successively Attorney-General, Secretary of War and Secretary of State of the Confederacy. She is a member of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, the Southern Club and the Women's City Club.

75 PRIESTS AT FUNERAL MASS

The funeral of Rev. Francis X. Kelleher, who was curate at Blessed Sacrament Church, Jamaica Plain, was conducted today from that church, attended by seventy-five priests.

There was a children's mass, celebrated by Msgr. Arthur T. Connolly, pastor. A solemn high mass of requiem followed at which Rev. Frank Shields of Concord Junction was celebrant. He was assisted by Rev. Joseph Quigley of Brookline as deacon, Rev. Howard McKenzie of Somerville, sub-deacon, and Rev. Richard J. Cushing, master of ceremonies. Rev. John B. Peterson of Somerville preached the eulogy.

GRAY FIRST 'JOKED' AT HIS ARREST AS SNYDER SLAYER

Gray was treated from the time he was arrested until he signed the confession did not constitute a third degree? A.—I can. The men questioning him were very congenial with him.

Q.—Did he seem to be actuated by fear when he signed the confession? A.—No.

Q.—Nor weariness, exhaustion? A.—No.

Q.—He was still going strong? A.—He was.

McDermott denied that any third degree methods had been used on the train.

Q.—Did you hear anyone tell Gray that Ruth Snyder had confessed? A.—No.

Q.—Did you hear anyone say "You'd better come through now or you'll get yours in New York"? A.—I did not.

Ceased to Be a "Joke"

Q.—Was his confession entirely free? A.—It was. Suddenly he just said, "Boys, I was at that house," and then out it all came.

Q.—When did he first stop treating the case as a joke? A.—When I told him we had the contents of the waste basket in his Syracuse room. Right then he got serious.

From the train, McDermott said Gray was taken to the office of District Attorney Newcombe, where half a dozen officials, including District Attorney Newcombe and George V. McLaughlin, then police commissioner, continued the questioning.

During all this testimony Gray sat in court with bowed head, but apparently unmoved. Occasionally he leaned over and whispered to his counsel.

Q.—Did you tell him you did not want to beat him up? A.—I told him in the presence of Lieutenant Brown that we thought we were sufficiently educated to get him to tell us what he knew and did not want to mistreat him.

William Millard, of counsel for Gray, then took the witness and reminded him of a meeting they had outside the jail.

Q.—Didn't you say to me then that when you arrested Gray he didn't know what it was all about? A.—I don't remember.

Q.—You remember meeting me? A.—Yes.

Boy Sold Sash Weight

Q.—What did you say? A.—There was no conversation.

Q.—Are you saying that seriously? A.—Yes.

"Oh, all right, you're excused."

Samuel Miller, Gray's chief counsel, then took the stand for questioning by his associate.

He told of meeting between himself, Millard and McDermott.

Q.—What did McDermott say? A.—He asked how Gray was getting along and volunteered the information that at the time of the arrest he did not think Gray realized the seriousness of the situation.

Miss Margaret Hamilton, buyer for Rose-Gorman-Rose, a Kingston department store, then took the stand and told of seeing Gray on March 4.

Arthur R. Bailey, 15, of Kingston, an employe of Winnie's hardware store, his memory refreshed by a sale's slip, testified that he sold a five-pound sash weight on March 4. He could not, however, recollect to whom the sale was made.

The weight itself was then handed the witness. Bailey said it was of a type his store carried. He said the sales slip was in his hand writing.

The witness identified the paper as a warehouse slip for a five-pound sash weight. He said, on cross-examination, that his store sold many sash weights and that there was nothing to distinguish this weight from any other.

John Sanford, fellow employe of Bailey, who followed on the stand, said he got a warehouse slip between March 4. He couldn't remember whether he brought a sash weight the slip called for.

Gray's Flimsy Alibi Is Torn Into Shreds

By MARBERY REX

New York, April 26.—Judd Gray's alibi so poorly constructed after the stupid muter of Albert Snyder is now being gone over bit by bit, a sleazy fabric of lies that fringed off into easy discovery.

Circumstances always seem to work against concealment by human beings of even innocent little white lies. Break a dinner engagement for a better "date" and the alibi perhaps sometimes will reveal itself in the most embarrassing manner. How then to break a date with one's own conventional code, commit murder and get away with it? Ask Judd Gray another!

Ruth Snyder today is the same trim, self-possessed creature she has been every moment so far. It is still early in the day and neither the defendant's mothers has arrived to fortify her erring child.

Science punches the time clock in court again today. Comes early and stays late.

The innocent bystanders crowd court today for a glimpse at wife Ruth and Judd. The lavender wins are in the minority today. Red seems predominate.

"Well, gentlemen. I was at my house that night," Gray's first statement, recounted by a defense witness who describes the remainder of Gray suddenly turned into confession, which must have been a lie. The little salesman's life of carrying samples, with an occasional bit of philandering, could not help convey the excess baggage of guilty secret. He must have been glad to check it with the law.

THE SASHWEIGHT APPEARS.

Margaret Hamilton of Kingston takes the stand. Fiery red smart and hat band, she is a stout little woman with snub features, who says she works in a hardware store. Her respectable face flushes at the sight of the defendant Snyder. And the hardware dealer is asked if she sold the five-pound sashweight. A heavy-set court attendant lifts the guilty sashweight wearily to show the witness.

Judd's head is sunk low. He'd rather not hear about that "blunt instrument." Ruth adjusts her hat.

Defendant Snyder would be willing that the sashweight and picture wire be accused of the murder—and let it go at that.

In the middle of their plotting Ruth and Judd did not neglect their pots toss. They liked to visit "Henry's," the famous Scandinavian cafe, on Saturdays, a waiter testified, because "chicken fricassee" was the specialty of the house that day. Judd, observed with a package under his arm, is believed to have taken to the sash weight along to that last fricassee feast.

Bailey, or the customer, whose appearance he could not recall.

Martin Bulenthaler of Woodside, a railroad man, testified he knew both defendants, having seen them frequently in the restaurant. On March 4 said they were there with a little girl and Gray had a parcel with him.

Reginald Rose, a New York Central ticket agent at Grand Central station, told of seeing Gray March 19 when the corset salesman came to his window from the gate where the Empire State express had just arrived from Buffalo, via Syracuse.

He bought a ticket back to Syracuse for the 8:45 a. m. train on March 20. A Pullman seat was only available as far as Albany and Gray took it.

Milton C. Pidgeon of Bellaire, who had met the Snyders at Fort Jefferson, and who was host of the card party at which the Snyders were guests the night of the murder, then took the stand.

Q.—What time did they arrive? A.—About 8:15.

Q.—Was liquor served? A.—It was.

Drinks for Husband

Q.—Did Mrs. Snyder say anything to you about drinks? A.—As I was fixing the second drink, Ruth came into the kitchen and told me she wasn't feeling very well. "Give my drinks to Albert," she said.

Q.—At other parties in your home had Mrs. Snyder consumed her share of the drinks? A.—She had.

Arthur W. Stanford of Astoria, another guest at the card party, said he passed her a drink.

"Ruth said she didn't feel like drinking," he said, "and asked me to pass it to Albert."

Q.—Had you ever seen her drink to excess? A.—No.

George V. McLaughlin, former New York City police commissioner, the next witness, testified to a conversation he had with Mrs. Ruth Snyder as she lay in bed the day her husband was killed.

McLaughlin said she told him of returning from the card party, of being seized by a man with a black moustache and of fainting.

Q.—Did she know her husband was dead at that time? A.—Detectives told me she did not. I informed her of the fact. She swept away a few tears and then continued to answer questions.

Q.—You saw her later at a police station? A.—Yes.

Q.—She still told the same story? A.—Yes.

Mr. McLaughlin said Mrs. Snyder first said she had been overcome by a burglar but later told him of trouble she had had with her husband.

She told him that her husband had not shown any affection for her for the last nine or ten years. She said also that she had remained away from home al night and that her husband had objected.

Later, with a handkerchief to her eyes, she stated, he said that she had not been telling the truth and wanted to confess.

"When I handed her a slip on which was written the name Gray," he said, "she said, 'That is the man. Has he confessed?'"

She then told him, Mr. McLaughlin said, of her relations with Gray.

He quoted her as saying she had told Gray of her domestic troubles and they had decided "the only way out was to get rid of Snyder."

Mr. McLaughlin then told how Mrs. Snyder told him of returning home the night of the murder, putting her daughter and Snyder to bed, and going to Gray where he was hiding in another room.

She then told him, he said, that Gray went in and struck Snyder while she stayed in the hall watching him. Immediately after that they prepared the burglar evidence and burned clothes which had become blood-stained.

Then, after taking several drinks, Gray tied up Mrs. Snyder and perfected the burglar theory, witness testified Mrs. Snyder told him.

From that point on the confessions of Gray and Mrs. Snyder were the same, McLaughlin said.

On the way back to Syracuse, Mr. McLaughlin said, Gray told him he threw a brief case out of the train window.

Mr. McLaughlin was not cross-examined.

FLOOD REDUCES COTTON CROP A MILLION BALES

New Orleans, April 26 (A.P.).—Frank H. Hayne, former president of the New Orleans Cotton Exchange, issued a statement today saying that regardless of any reduction in the 1927 cotton acreage, the present flood probably will reduce this year's crop by at least 1,000,000 bales.

He said the inundated acreage now not be all cotton land, but that sufficient acreage is under water to make a 1,000,000-bale reduction probable.

CHINESE SHOTS HIT SEVERAL U. S. SAILORS

Shanghai, April 26 (A.P.).—Several sailors aboard the United States naval auxiliary vessel Penguin were wounded, one it is feared mortally, when the ship was heavily and persistently fired on from the south bank of the Yangtse River eight miles from Kiangyin, about midway between Nanking and Shanghai.

The Penguin, which was convoying the steamers Tungwo and Tuckwo down the river, replied to the fire with machine guns and rifles, after which field pieces were fired on her, to which the American vessel replied with her larger guns.

The American destroyer Paul Jones also was fired on with machine guns, but from the north bank of the Yangtze, eight miles east of K...

The steamer Changwo was fired on by field pieces while under convoy by the American destroyer John D. Ford as the vessel was proceeding up the river near Nanking.

NEW ORLEANS OPENS FIGHT ON FLOOD

Artillery of the National Guard were called out to patrol the levees between here and Kenner, 20 miles away.

A call was issued for the enlistment of all the registered Red Cross nurses in the city.

Four squads of policemen were ordered on duty to patrol the levees in the city.

The Student Council at Tulane announced that the students there had been organized for any service during the emergency and could be called out on an hour's notice.

Flood Toll Nears 500; New Areas Submerged

Memphis, Tenn., April 26 (A.P.).—The Mississippi River and its tributaries today flooded new territory in Mississippi, Arkansas and Louisiana, rendering additional thousands homeless.

With the known death list steadily climbing above the one hundred mark, and varying estimates of from 200 to 500 dead in the whole stricken area, every precaution was being taken to prevent additional casualties from disease, hunger and exposure.

While boats and aircraft scoured the flooded districts for marooned persons, other vessels and planes raced to concentration centres and stricken towns with food, clothing and medicines.

Refugees from newly inundated towns and communities in the three States, swelled the ranks of the homeless which already had been estimated at 150,000.

In Southeastern Arkansas nearly a dozen small towns were receiving backwater from old breaks in the Arkansas River, the inhabitants either climbing to the levees or removing to nearby towns which remained dry.

The Southern Mississippi delta, through which the waters from the Stops Landing break in the main Mississippi levee, must course before rejoining the parent stream near Vicksburg, was another scene of evacuation as the flood waters joined with the backwater of the Yazoo and piled beyond.

In Northern Louisiana, small tributaries of the Mississippi added to the peril from the winding Red River. Towns located in the low places were preparing for emergencies or being evacuated by large numbers of citizens. Sections of the Southern Louisiana delta below New Orleans received more water from the Diamond Crevasse.

STRENGTHEN LEVEES.

Meanwhile with urgent warnings issued on nearly every hand, men labored to rear higher the main Mississippi levees from Vicksburg to New Orleans, where the raging torrent has been in check through continued vigilance.

With the crest of the flood past Memphis and the belief that the main Mississippi levees for a good distance south are in rapidly diminishing danger, Secretary of Commerce Hoover and Major General Jadwin, chief of army engineers, have expressed concern for what may happen when the highest water reaches the lower delta.

Secretary Hoover is making a tour of inspection through the flooded area of the Mississippi, accompanied by General Jadwin and James L. Fieser, acting National chairman of the Red Cross. The itinerary included Greenville and Vicksburg today.

THREE ARE INJURED IN AUTO CRASH IN QUINCY

Three men were injured, one seriously, in an auto crash at Robertson and Willard streets, Quincy, today. Traffic was tied up for half an hour. The crash occurred at the height of the inbound traffic rush.

Michael Cammarata, 45, of Fifth street, Roslindale, was thrown from the auto in which he was riding and received a fractured skull and other injuries. His name is on the danger list at the Quincy Hospital. Joseph Cammarata, his son, received cuts and bruises. Joseph Sarni of Braintree, occupant of the other auto, also received cuts and bruises.

TWO PLEAD NOT GUILTY TO ROXBURY STORE THEFT

After they had pleaded not guilty to attempted larceny from the Frank Ferdinand Company store, Roxbury, Ansel Baker and William McGuire of Roxbury had their cases continued until May 11 by Judge Palmer in Roxbury Court. Girl employes of the store who observed the alleged suspicious action of the two young men caused their arrest.

SENATOR MOSES STILL AT HOME WITH BAD COLD

Concord, N. H., April 26 (A.P.).—Although still confined to his home with a severe cold, United States Senator George H. Moses was reported as somewhat improved today. The Senator was forced to leave his office yesterday.

His friends said this morning that while the Senator required rest there is no reason at present for concern over his condition.

STANDARD OIL PLANS NO TANK SITE IN QUINCY

The Parker Yacht Basin at Quincy Point is "out" as a prospective site for oil storage tanks as far as the Standard Oil Company is concerned at present; officials of the company declared today in Boston, denying the rumor that Socony was contemplating purchase of the Basin in Quincy.

OFFICER'S AUTO RAMS TRAIN; HE MAY DIE

Patrolman William E. McTighe of Station 1, Hanover street, received possibly fatal injuries today when his automobile crashed into a Union freight train standing on Atlantic avenue, near the corner of Richmond street.

McTighe's name is on the danger list at the Haymarket Relief Station. He was on his way to work at the time of the accident. Dr. Devine found McTighe to be suffering from a fractured skull, a deep laceration over the right eye and multiple contusions and abrasions. The automobile was wrecked.

The injured policeman is married and has a seven-year-old daughter. He lives at No. 17 Hillsboro street, Dorchester. He is thirty-three years old.

HOUSE ADOPTS OWN "L" ORDER IN SPITE OF SENATE

Refusing to be balked by the action of the Senate in killing the Shattuck joint order directing the public utilities commission to revalue the property of the Elevated the House today adopted an order of its own to bring about the desired investigation. A second order was adopted under which the clerk is authorized to make public answers to questions on phases affecting the constitutionality of the Elevated control bill when received from the Supreme Court.

SHAW PORTRAIT TURNED DOWN BY ACADEMY

London, April 26 (A.P.).—A stir was caused in art circles today by the announcement that the hanging committee of the Royal Academy has rejected a portrait of George Bernard Shaw, the British playwright, by the well known artist, John Collier.

The committee gave no reason for the rejection, but it was pointed out many pictures are rejected yearly.

WALSH CHARGES COOLIDGE IS 'WRECKING U.S.'

Columbus, O., April 26 (A.P.).—Politics of the Coolidge administration are deflating farmers, wrecking banks, curtailing industry and causing unemployment, Senator David I. Walsh, Massachusetts, declared before the annual Jefferson Day banquet here.

Senator Walsh asserted 4,000,000 farmers have been driven to cities in the last five years by Republican policies, but that the cities were not able to give them employment.

"The economic system of the Republican Party encourages monopolies and if unchecked in a few years will result in the complete annihilation of the independent merchant. It will only be a very few years until we are all hired men. We have as examples chain stores and bakeries. My grievance is that the government is encouraging this monopoly."

Governor Donahey was indorsed as available presidential timber by Senator Elmer Thomas, Democrat, Oklahoma, who attended the meeting.

EDUCATION OF ADULTS URGED BY FILENE

Chapel Hill, N. C., April 26—Adult education is the crying need in business today, members of the National University Extension Association were told by Edward A. Filene, Boston merchant and economist, who addressed the opening session of the association gathering.

"Most employers enter business unprepared by education for their life's work," Mr. Filene declared. "At best they are only technically prepared for a particular kind of work. As a result of this lack, or of training that has made them believe traditional thinking is right thinking, the majority of employes, even in executive positions, consciously or unconsciously oppose the coming changes of the second industrial revolution' that is upon us."

BUSINESS REVOLUTION.

Mass production and mass distribution were declared by Mr. Filene to have brought about the revolution in modern business. It is through mass production and distribution that America is enabled to penetrate the markets of the four corners of the world.

He pointed out that these industrial improvements will be the salvation of Europe, enabling the impoverished masses there to get steady employment at good wages and buy more of the necessities and so-called luxuries of life.

As this is done Europe will be able to buy more freely of America and by buying more of other countries will enable those countries also to buy more of America's surplus products.

EXISTING NEEDS.

Mr. Filene said adult education is necessary because the present generation of school children will not grow up in time to meet the existing needs even if their present education could be suitably changed.

"Fortunately business conditions are such as to favor and help adult education," Mr. Filene declared. "The successful business of the future is going to be big business and the types of big business will go to those who can learn how to work with the new conditions, and to lead and organize in the new kind of production and distribution."

Man's Tongue Severed, Two Companions Under Arrest

Chicago, April 26 (A.P.).—A man's tongue virtually severed sent the victim to a hospital and caused the arrest of two companions, who denied any criminal fault.

Police, however, refused to accept the explanation of the prisoners, John Wolniak and George Ponshock, that the injury to George Krawczyk had been incurred in an automobile accident.

They are inclined to believe he had been taken for "a ride." The victim, who is expected to die, had a slash in his coat, as though made by a razor, but no weapon was found.

SIXTY MEXICAN DIE IN FIGHT

Mexico City, April 26 (A.P.).—Federal forces sent in pursuit of the rebel band which attacked the Guadalajara train last Tuesday overtook the rebels at El Guitarrero valley, in Jalisco, on Saturday, and in the five-hour battle which followed sixty of the band, eight soldiers and an officer were killed.

This was made known by the War Office last night, it being added that the rebels were commanded by the Catholic priests Vega and Angulo.

The announcement said the combat took place in a six-mile area and that when the rebels were dispersed they abandoned 100 horses fully saddled, and a large quantity of arms and ammunition.

The War Office also made the announcement that 32 rebels were killed in combats with federal troops at Lobos Canyon and Cabos Ranch, in the state of Jalisco. Twenty-seven guns, 61 horses and a banner described as containing a picture of the Virgin of Guadalupe, Mexico's patron saint, are said to have been captured.

BACK BAY CAFE MAN SLAIN IN HOLDUP

man must have spent hours of pain in the cellar.

Two 32-calibre shells were found near the body, one exploded the other unexploded. No gun was found, however.

Inspector Harry Pierce and detergant Frank McNabb, who are investigating the case, believe the robbers must have been familiar with the place, for few knew of the strange money cache in the cellar icechest.

The slayers ransacked the restaurant upstairs, but did not touch the safe, evidently aware that there was no money in it.

Police later learned that Chyehuk lived at No. 1 Dedham street, where other tenants said he posed as a "motion picture man." New photographs and addressed envelopes to friends in Russia were found in his room.

A cleaver and the neck of a broken bottle were taken by police on the theory that they might contain fingerprints.

The slain man had been employed at the lunchroom for two years. According to police, he was a model employe and always on time. His work included taking care of the night's receipts. The fact that the door to the alley was open, police say, shows that he probably recognized someone outside who demanded entrance. The fact that the murderer knew the hiding place for the money also indicated "inside" information.

Medical Examiner Leary viewed the body and will perform an autopsy. District Attorney William J. Foley assigned Assistant District Attorney McDonnell to aid the police in the investigation.

5TH INFANTRY COMING FROM MAINE TO BOSTON

In preparation for the attack on New England's coast by a fleet of battleships, cruisers, destroyers and submarines next month, the Fifth U. S. Infantry from Portland, Me., will be transported to Fort Adams, Newport, R. I., according to orders issued at this army base today.

The troop movement will begin next Monday. The soldiers will be brought over the road in trucks to Boston; they will be quartered here on arrival and will move on to Newport the next day. Another battalion from the Fifth will participate in the dedication of the Weeks Memorial bridge in Cambridge May 14. They will then be moved to Newport to prepare for the enemy attack.

HUDSON LINE ORCHESTRAS WILL GIVE WAY TO RADIO

New York, April 26 (A.P.)—Radio will replace orchestras on the night boats of the Hudson River Navigation Corporation, it was announced today. Diners and dancers on the four boats plying between New York and Albany will enjoy the same music as that heard by patrons in New York hotels and night clubs.

The initial expense of radio installation is estimated at $3,000. The company heretofore has spent $25,000 a season for orchestral music.

ADVERTISING BILLS IN U. S. INCREASE TO $235,000,000

New York, April 26 (A.P.)—National newspaper advertising in the United States was $15,000,000 greater in 1926 than in 1925, it is estimated in the annual report of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association made public today.

The total of national advertising in 1926 was $220,000,000. In 1926 this was increased to $235,000, the report estimates. This was an estimated increase of 6.7 per cent.

MADEIROS NEAR COLLAPSE IN DEATH CELL

lon. He spends much time each day in prayer with the prison chaplain, Father Michael J. Murphy. For the rest of the time he stares at pictures in magazines or he sleeps.

The slayer's physical condition is not good. He is forced to eat broths, while fruit juices are also a part of his diet. He is being fed what he desires, but his wants are simple.

At the meeting with his slater and mother today, Madeiros did not collapse or even break down, but the strain told on him and the prison physician is fearful that the man will collapse before he goes to the chair.

The last hope of the slayer rests with the Governor and his council. They meet tomorrow morning and unless they act the fate of the slayer is sealed.

If another respite is granted Madeiros it will be taken to indicate that Governor Fuller has decided to intervene in the Sacco-Vanzetti case and that an investigation will be conducted into the case of the two radical slayers who are sentenced to die the week of July 10. Madeiros' "confession" that he was a member of the gang that killed Paymaster Parmenter and his guard in South Braintree, seven years ago, and that Sacco and Vanzetti were not concerned in the crime, has already won Madeiros two reprieves.

Meanwhile the flood of messages pouring into the office of Governor Fuller and dealing with the Sacco and Vanzetti case continues unabated. Among the letters received today was one from Judge Lightner of the sixth judicial district of Nebraska.

The judge urges Governor Fuller to review the Sacco and Vanzetti case. "I feel quite sure from reading the article of Professor Frankfurter that these men are innocent," the judge wrote.

LETTERS ASK CLEMENCY.

Letters were received asking for a review or clemency from the following:

The Metal Polishers' International Union, Chicago, Ill.; Harold J. Giesel, New York; The Young Workers' League, International Labor Corporation Co-operative Store, Pittston, Pa.

A letter was received today by Governor Fuller on a letterhead bearing the emblazonment: Realm of Massachusetts, Klan No. 12, Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, New Bedford."

The missive said:

"We are unanimous in favor that the sentence of Judge Thayer be executed. That Sacco and Vanzetti shall pay the penalty by courts of Massachusetts upheld."

The letter was signed "Charles A. Briggs" and under the signature was inscribed: "Kigrapp No. 12."

SACCO DEFENSE DISTURBED.

At the Sacco Defense Committee Headquarters today there was considerable agitation over the attack made on the committee by Dean John H. Wigmore of Northeastern University, Chicago. Dean Wigmore, a Harvard graduate, bitterly denounced the movement on behalf of Sacco and Vanzetti and he likewise denounced the men who are in the movement.

According to Gardner Jackson of the defense committee, the article by Professor Felix Frankfurter of Harvard is a perfect answer to the Chicago man's charges. Mr. Jackson announced, however, that a specific answer to the charges will be drawn up by the defense committee and will be made public.

Lawyers Ask Fuller to Name Sacco Commission

A petition signed by a number of the leading members of the Massachusetts bar, today asked Governor Fuller to appoint a commission to review the Sacco and Vanzetti case. The petition set forth that Governor Fuller had called in an expert, Charles E. Hughes, to determine property rights in the Boston Elevated, and suggests that human rights are even more to be considered.

At the head of the petition is the name of Francis B. Sayre, son-in-law of the late President Woodrow Wilson. Other signers were:

Roscoe Pound, dean of the Harvard Law School; Henry F. Hurlburt, Francis P. Garland, Damon E. Hall, Robert G. Dodge, Joseph F. O'Connell, James B. Thayer, Joseph P. Walsh, Bentley W. Warren, H. R. Bygrave, James A. M. McLaurklin, Austin W. Scott, John M. Maguire, F. H. Bohlen and Edgar R. James.

BOY HOLDS OWN IN GAME FIGHT FOR BREATH

Roanoke, Va., April 26 (A.P.)—Walter Boothe was holding his own today in his battle with a strange affliction that had paralyzed his arms, legs, torso and lungs.

One hundred and fourteen hours after a score of friends, working in shifts of two, began administering artificial respiration to the eighteen-year-old farmer boy, whose lungs collapsed while he was being prepared for an operation for a dislocated vertebrae, hospital attendants made the following announcement:

"He is holding his own. There is no change that we can see."

Members of the youth's family have lost hope, but the boy, flat on his back in an apparatus designed to relieve his suffering from the dislocated vertebrae, fights on. It is a losing battle, in the opinion of physicians but only once has Boothe become discouraged.

"I am going to die, mother," he said when she endeavored to encourage him.

"Oh, no, you are not, son," she whispered. "I am going to stay here with you . . . Jesus and you are going to live."

"No, you go on home," the youth said. "You are needed there."

Boothe was injured in an automobile wreck last May, which followed an earlier fall while carrying a heavy weight. His condition became more aggravated and doctors discovered his vertebrae was dislocated.

Today doctors said he had one chance in a million to pull through. His calls for air were increasing and his general condition weakening, although he retained consciousness.

HOUSE HITS AT GOV. FULLER ON TENANT LAW

The lower house of the Massachusetts Legislature, by an overwhelming vote today refused to follow the suggestion of Governor Fuller regarding the State emergency housing law. This law has been passed at each session of the Legislature for the past ten years, and at this session a permanent measure was enacted.

Governor Fuller returned the bill with the suggestion that the Legislature eliminate the clause which would grant to the courts the power to permit a tenant to remain in his rented property for thirty days after being ordered out by the owner.

Originally the bill provided that the courts could grant a tenant the right to occupy his rented property for six months after being ordered out. This was later reduced to three months and in the bill recently passed the limit is fixed at one month.

The Governor stated that he did not believe the clause was constitutional. When the bill was returned today, an opinion was secured from Attorney General Reading that the clause was constitutional.

INSURANCE FIRM GIVEN TIME TO ARRANGE AFFAIRS

Motors Mutual Insurance company was given a continuance to Friday in order to straighten its affairs when a hearing on Insurance Commissioner Wesley E. Monk's petition for an injunction came before Judge Bradley today.

Attys. James A. Mulhall asked the court for time to arrange the company's affairs in accordance with the insurance laws. He said the company president had resigned and an experienced insurance man was in charge. Judge Braley granted his request.

"SHORTS" FLY TO COVER AS WALL ST. STOCKS SOAR

Stocks closed strong in Wall Street today. Bangor & Aroostook was up 9 points at 78. When prices started rapidly upward in the last hour, those who had sold "short" scrambled wildly to cover. Rises of 3 to 5 points were common. General Motors, U. S. Steel, du Pont, Cast Iron Pipe, Air Reduction, Sloss, Porto Rico Sugar and Fathe were in the forefront of the excited advance.

Explosions Wreck Block

Jersey City, N. J., April 26 (A.P.)—Fire resulting from a series of explosions destroyed a four-story brick structure owned by a feed and mill company on the West New York waterfront today. The damage was estimated at $100,000.

ORDERS O'HARA REINSTATED IN REVERE

Police Lieutenant Thomas O'Hara of Revere, removed from the department in August, 1925, won today a battle for reinstatement that he has waged ever since that time.

After a long review of evidence taken at the hearing that preceded removal, Judge Michael Sullivan of the Dorchester court ordered that Mayor John E. Walsh reinstate the police lieutenant and that the lieutenant be paid in full for all the time since his being ousted.

The officer therefore, will collect approximately $2,600 back pay.

O'Hara was removed as the result of charges preferred against him by Mayor Walsh. In court, however, the charge made against him was not sustained and he was found not guilty.

Immediately on acquittal in court, Lieutenant O'Hara requested of the mayor that he be returned to his office, but Mayor Walsh refused.

Then the lieutenant appealed to the courts and the case was given to Judge Sullivan, as an unbiased jurist, for review.

With the return of the police lieutenant to the fold, another candidate looms up for the vacant post of police chief at the beach, Lieutenant O'Hara being eligible to take the civil service examination set for May 10.

Since his dismissal from the department the officer has been working at the Boston Fish Pier.

Narcissa Vanderlip Weds

New York, April 26 (A.P.)—Miss Narcissa Vanderlip, daughter of Frank A. Vanderlip, former president of the National City Bank, became the bride of Julian Street of Princeton, N. J., son of the novelist.

HUBBY, 63, SLAYS WIFE'S BUGGY-RIDING BEAU

Trenton, N. J., April 26 (A.P.)—In the office of Justice of the Peace Elmer Smith at Lambertville, where less than a month ago Charles Price, 62, and his wife, Laura, 38, made a strange pact, under which she was privileged to use Price's buggy to "go out when and with whom she pleased," Price was arraigned today for the murder last night of Edward Masterson, 38.

Price married Laura when she was 14. They have one son, Charles, Jr., 18. The mismated pair lived together until last month, when Price told his wife she would have to forget Masterson. After a week's separation, she agreed to return to Price under terms of the unique agreement to which they swore before Justice Smith. Mrs. Price was privileged to use Price's buggy for her nightly trips with Masterson, provided she remained at home long enough to prepare Price's meals.

The end of the strange affair came three months after a fist fight between Price and Masterson, in which the old man was severely beaten and told to stay away under threat of death. He told of the death threat in a sworn statement today.

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON HAPPENINGS IN SOCIETY CIRCLES

Misses De Pierrefeu Are Wished "Bon Voyage" at Party Given at Club Marco

VERY GAY AND JOLLY and informal was the dinner-dance at the Club Marco last evening. It was a "Bon Voyage" party for Miss Dolores and Miss Leonora Dedons de Pierrefeu, and Mrs. Horace Drinkwater and Miss Eleanor Drinkwater were the hostesses. And the Club Marco, with its pleasantly inviting al fresco vistas, was exclusively the young set's for the evening. And there was a stag line of overwhelmingly large proportions. So, all in all, it was just the sort of party voted "wonderful" by the feminine guests.

MRS. DRINKWATER WAS handsomely turned out in a lace-flounced frock of royal blue touched with orchid, and Miss Eleanor Drinkwater was in black taffeta, a smart little affair of French inspiration with its many narrow ruffles fringed at the hem, and a cluster of gardenias at the shoulder. Miss Dolores de Pierrefeu's lovely frock was of pastel chiffon, mauve and violet, with a graceful fuschu effect, and her younger sister, Miss Leonora de Pierrefeu, was also in chiffon of the bright soft green of tender new leaves.

IT IS INDEED BON VOYAGE for them, for today they are speeding to New York to sail on Saturday on the American Banker, to be away for a year or more. Study and travel is the program, and their field for the former will be interior decorating. Both girls are greatly talented and, having lived much abroad, have a most enviable facility in the languages. They are the daughters of Mrs. Joseph Daniels Leland of Milton, who is now in New York to send them on their way.

EVEN THOUGH THE SWAN song of the debutante dancing season is sung, frocks were as fresh as maiden cheeks were pink. Verily might it have been an early season party, rather than one at the end of a strenuous Winter. Miss Esther Gardner was radiant in green moire; Miss Eleanor Perkins, likewise in a becoming black velvet, set off with a rope of pearls and having a slender drapery from the shoulder. Miss Margaret Wentworth's frothy, clear white net and moire had tiny threads of silver to outline the flounces, and a cluster of sweet peas clung to one shoulder.

MISS MARIE LOUISE GRAY wore a jade moire, its off-the-shoulder bodice outlined in glinting silver. Miss Marjorie Morrill was in turquoise, a flounced effect. Miss Nancy Morison's tissue frock shaded from palest rose at the neck line to deep rose at the hem. Miss Helga Gray was in bright Chinese red. Mrs. William Hall Rice, 2d, was in rose. Miss Agnes Murchie in black moire; Miss Elizabeth Gardiner in midnight blue velvet; Miss Betty Moulton in rose; Miss Elsie DeNormandie in white.

CANDLELIGHT AND THE ingenious touches of Italian color make a charming dance scene of the Club Marco. The soft candlelight beamed on a most attractive company. Miss Edith Wolcott was in it, wearing rose. And Miss Virginia Curtin, in mauve chiffon. And Miss Louise Russell in sky blue net, and Miss Eugenia Frothingham in rose and gold metal cloth. To have the club exclusively for the evening was a most happy plan of Mrs. Drinkwater's. One that will be followed by many hostesses another season, as Wednesday through the entire next Winter is to be allotted thus, according to present plans of the charming Mrs. Reed, who rules the club's pleasant destinies.

HAVING TRAVELED INTO the world's far places and seen many of its wonders, it is quite natural that Joseph Lindon Smith's paintings should depict scenes far from the beaten path followed by the painting fraternity. Those now on view at the Copley Gallery are scenes done by Mr. Smith when he journeyed far into the wilds of Indo-China and again when he invaded the wonders of archeological excavations to picture the tombs of long dead queens. Mr. Smith's stay in town was of the briefest, merely sufficiently long to oversee the placing of his canvases. He and his interesting family now live in New York.

MISS GLORIA BRAGGIOTTI IS back from Bermuda sporting the most glorious early Spring coat of tan, that is mightily becoming. Her stay with Mrs. Hamilton Garland at "Parapet House" at Somerset Bridge was marked by much gay entertaining, with a touch of the military pomp and brilliance that is so much a part of Bermuda's residential life.

PREHISTORIC BONES OF CHILD DATE TO 60,000 B. C.

New York, April 26 (A.P.)—The theory that Africa is the birthplace of the human race is strengthened, in the opinion of Alonzo W. Pond, Beloit College anthropologist by discovery in Mechta-El-Abbe, Algeria, of the skull and bones of a child which he believes date back to 60,000 B. C.

Announcement of the discovery was made by Mr. Pond, director of the Logan African expedition of Beloit College, upon his return here on the Leviathan.

The finding was preceded by the discovery of an ancient camp site under a hard calcium carbonate crust after a foot of earth had been removed.

"Thirty-one inches below the calcium carbonate covering was the skull and besides it the long bones of the arms and legs, some of the vertebras and the small bones of the extremities," said Mr. Pond.

The remains of the prehistoric child, Mr. Pond said, are being shipped to America for final classification.

MATHER AND STRATON TO DEBATE EVOLUTION

New York, April 26 (A.P.)—Evolution will be the subject of two forthcoming debates between the Rev. Dr. John Roach Straton, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, and Professor Kirtley Mather of the department of geology at Harvard University, it was announced today. Tentative dates for the meetings are May 13 and 14.

MAJOR WILBUR, U. S. A., TO BE B. U. INSTRUCTOR

Major William H. Wilbur, U. S. Infantry, stationed at Fort Benning, Ga., and noted as a military instructor, has been appointed professor of military science and tactics at Boston University, it was announced today.

WM. W. THOMAS, DIPLOMAT, DIES

Portland, Me., April 26 (A.P.)—William Widgery Thomas, American diplomat, author, colonizer and Scandinavian authority, was dead here today after a brief illness. He was 87 years old.

Of Mr. Thomas, who was minister to Sweden under five Presidents, Secretary of State Hay wrote on the occasion of his retirement, in 1905:

"You have had the longest, most distinguished and most useful term of service in Sweden and Norway that any American has ever had."

Thomas achieved fame in more than one field. In 1870, the year in which he was named immigration commissioner for Maine, he brought 51 colonists from Sweden and settled them in Aroostock County.

From that small beginning sprang the town of New Sweden with its 4,000 inhabitants, and the adjoining communities of Stockholm and Westmanland.

Mr. Thomas was graduated from Bowdoin College and later finished his legal studies at Harvard. He entered the diplomatic service in 1865.

CANADIANS SEEK RELIEF FROM U. S. BORDER BAN

Buffalo, N. Y., April 26 (A.P.)—Concerted action by civic organizations on both sides of the Canadian border to lessen the rigidity of the new United States immigration regulations, is in prospect, the Associated Press was informed today.

It started with a mass meeting at Niagara Falls, Ont., under Chamber of Commerce auspices. A resolution was adopted asking that the Canadian government attempt to seek relief from the ruling for thousands of its citizens who are at present employed in American factories.

PINEDO TO RESUME FLIGHT NEXT WEEK

New York, April 26 (A.P.)—Commander Francesco De Pin do, Italian aviator whose flight over four continents was interrupted three weeks ago when a carelessly-tossed match caused destruction his plane at Roosevelt Lake, Ariz., plans to resume his flight next week.

A sister plane to the wrecked Santa Maria is expected from Italy Saturday.

Bleak House — By Charles Dickens

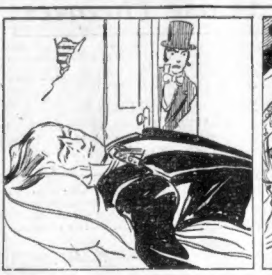
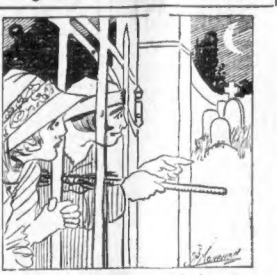
VISITING the church near the ancestral home of Sir Leicester Dedlock, Esther saw the proud and languid Lady Dedlock. She connected her in a vague way with her dead godmother, Miss Barbary. Lady Dedlock was likewise struck by something familiar in Esther's appearance.

LADY DEDLOCK was also connected with the legal tangle over the Jarndyce estate. During an interview with her husband's solicitor, Mr. Tulkinghorn, over the case, she was so startled by the handwriting on one of the court papers shown her that she fainted.



TULKINGHORN determined to find the mysterious copyist whose handwriting had startled Lady Dedlock. But when he visited the clerk, known only by the name of Nemo, he found him dead from an overdose of opium. All documents relating to his identity had disappeared.



WHEN Tulkinghorn informed Lady Dedlock of Nemo's death she showed no emotion. But after the inquest she asked Jo, a boy street sweeper whom Nemo had befriended, to guide her to the man's grave. Tulkinghorn heard of this visit.

NAME WINNER OF AD REVIEW

The Prize Review of Current Advertising, conducted by the Boston Evening American and sponsored by the Advertising Club of Boston is now in its fifth week.

The results of the fourth weeks' competition which ended last Saturday, April 23, and embraced all the advertisements in the Boston Evening American during that week, will be announced in tomorrow's paper.

There is much speculation among the thousands who are following the progress of the Review as to which advertisement will be selected as the winner. A friendly rivalry has arisen among national advertisers, local manufacturers and local department and furniture stores. There is also a noticeable vieing for honors between agency-prepared advertisements and those which are created by individual advertising departments.

ALL ADS ELIGIBLE.

The judges, however, are reviewing and examining the advertisements on a predetermined rating scale with no reference to the source or size of the advertisement or the advertiser. All ads whether half an inch or full page size are passing under the scrutiny of the Board of Judges, five advertising experts who were appointed by Major F. F. O'Keefe, president of the Advertising Club of Boston.

Tomorrow's Boston Evening American will carry a reproduction, probably in reduced size, of the prize-winning ad for the fourth week of the contest and the names of those who were awarded Honorable Mention together with the dates of their insertion. Readers will thus have an opportunity to see how their own choices compare with the decisions of the judges.

APPROVED BY MANY.

Meanwhile, in accordance with the regular procedure of the review, all the ads in tonight's American and in every Boston Evening American this week are being considered for the next period of the contest. This will include all ads appearing in the Boston Evening American during the week ending Saturday, April 30.

The Prize Review of Current Advertising is the first competition of its kind to be conducted by any newspaper. It enjoys the approval and support of public officials, educators, business and professional men throughout New England and beyond.

Readers are invited to take an active part in the novel and important competition by writing to the Board of Judges, in care of the Boston Evening American, and telling what ad or ads they like best and why.

CATHOLIC PRIESTS START EXODUS FROM MEXICO

Mexico City, April 26 (A.P.).—El Sol, labor organ, says that a wholesale exodus of Catholic priests from Mexico to foreign countries is in prospect.

"Headquarters of the Mexican Episcopate in Havana at the present time," the paper declares, "has ordered Mexican priests to go to the United States and Cuba, and many are preparing to do so."

There is no knowledge here that the Mexican Episcopate is in Havana.

TODAY

OTHER PRESIDENTS have been satisfied with two elective terms as President. It seems to be a good idea, although there is no law about it. Mr. Coolidge thus far has been nominated and elected President once. He can, if he chooses, be nominated and very probably elected a second time.

Every American with a quarter of an ounce of brains knows that such a man as Coolidge would under no circumstances think of accepting a third term. And everybody who knows him understands that he will not be bothered or "bluffed" by a third term talk until after his second election.

IT IS at the election that the President shows and uses his power, and it was THREE ELECTIONS that Washington had in mind. An accidental part of a term with no election is not a Presidential term.

THE OTHER day Kerensky, now traveling in America, who had for a short time the pleasure of living in the Czar's palace and is here to denounce Bolshevism, said that it was worse than Czarism.

He may change his mind now that an admirer of the Czar has slapped his face at a public banquet.

Whatever else it may be, Bolshevism is an improvement on Czarism, for the reason that it teaches the people of Russia to read and write, and uses public monies to feed half-starved children.

RAILROAD MEN, doing their best to help stockholders, as they are bound to do, have concentrated on getting increased passenger fares and freight rates from the public authorities, and that has seemed good business. The time is not far off when good business will consist in finding a way to carry passengers and freight for LESS and thus making more money.

FOR INSTANCE, the train on which this is written, bound East from the Pacific, traveling just now 7,000 feet up in the air over the border from Arizona in New Mexico, on the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe, is as well managed and as good a type of American railroad as there is anywhere. It is profitable, its stock higher than it ever was.

THE DANGER to the railroads is a small, ridiculous looking thing on four wheels running along the highway, paralleling the highway on a "right of way" that costs the motor omnibus and motor truck nothing but the price of their license. Every day four motor buses leave Los Angeles carrying passengers to Chicago. That doesn't amount to much. But they can carry twice as many passengers as there are on this magnificent Santa Fe "Chief" express. And the bus overhead is one man driving and another man to relieve him.

Omnibus travel is uncomfortable travel and will never compete with the express train. But WHAT ABOUT THE FLYING MACHINE that will soon be here?

AND WHAT about freight hauling by omnibus? On the Mojave Desert, where this writer has just started pumping 100,000 gallons of water an hour from one well, farmers buying agricultural machinery from Los Angeles do not ask the railroad to carry it.

The farmer calls up the truck line at Victorville. The freight motor truck delivers the mowing machine, plow or "seed drill" right in the farmer's barnyard. The freight bus costs a little more per hundred than the freight train. But what you order today you get tomorrow and it is delivered at your door.

LIVING MODELS IN STYLE SHOW

A lingerie style show on living models is being staged twice daily this week in the Houghton & Dutton Company's store. These revues take place at 12:30 and 2:30 p. m. and are for women and girls only. The chief purpose of the revues is to demonstrate that styles in frilly underthings change the same as in other garments.

The new "coolie" coats, hand-painted in Parisian fashion, which are worn in the evening or in the boudoir, inexpensive pajamas for brides and charming dancing sets will be shown. Anne Bradford of the Home Service Bureau of the store will briefly explain the articles shown.

Oldfield Laments the "Death" of White House Spokesman

Washington, April 26 (A.P.)—Chairman Oldfield of the Democratic National Congressional Committee has issued a statement saying nothing has pained him so deeply as to learn that the White House spokesman is dead.

"The official spokesman, as I always visualized him," Oldfield declared, "was the man who told newspaper correspondent what the President was thinking about, things the President didn't dare talk about.

"Henceforth I shall always think that he came to his end because he would not come out and say plainly that the President was a candidate for a third term."

RAIN, WARMER IS FORECAST

More much-needed rain is expected to gladden the hearts of gardeners in and around Greater Boston tonight and tomorrow. A storm, centered northeast of Michigan, early today was moving toward Boston. Rain fell in New York early today.

Between 4 and 10 a. m. today the mercury rose 19 degrees from 39 above to 57. Similar warmth is expected for the next three or four days, according to government weather bureau officials.

Official forecast for Boston and vicinity:

Partly cloudy, probably showers tonight and Wednesday morning; not much change in temperature; fresh southwest winds shifting to west and northwest.

Frankfurter Reviews Sacco Case Theories

The Boston Evening American today publishes the final instalment of a legal analysis of the Sacco-Vanzetti case made by Felix Frankfurter, LL. B., instructor in law in Harvard.

In presenting Dr. Frankfurter's analysis, the Boston Evening American in no degree either endorses or sponsors it.

By FELIX FRANKFURTER

CHAPTER XV

Two witnesses who testified at the trial identified Joe Morelli as one of the men who did the shooting, and another identified Maneini (one of the gang).

The Morellis were American born, which explains the testimony at the trial that one of the bandits spoke clear and unmistakable English, a thing impossible to Sacco and Vanzetti.

Plainly the personnel of the Morelli gang fits the Braintree crime. What of other details? The mortal bullet came out of a 32 Colt; Joe Morelli had a 32 Colt at this time; Mancini's pistol was of a type and calibre to account for the other five bullets found in the victims. The "murder car" at the trial was a Buick.

Madeiros said a Buick was used; and Mike Morelli, according to the New Bedford police, at this time was driving a Buick, which disappeared immediately after April 15, 1920.

In fact, the police of New Bedford, where the Morelli gang had been operating, suspected them of the Braintree crime, but dropped the matter after the arrest of Sacco and Vanzetti.

Even so compressed a precis of the evidence of many witnesses will have made it clear that the defense has built up a powerful case, without the resources at the command of the State in criminal investigations. The witnesses other than Madeiros of themselves afford strong probability of the guilt of the Morellis.

What of the intrinsic credibility of Madeiro's confession. Which, if believed, settles the matter? A man who seeks to relieve another of guilt while himself about to undergo the penalty of death does not carry conviction. The circumstances of Madeiro's confession, however, free it from the usual suspicion and furnish assurances of its trustworthiness.

JEOPARDIZED LIFE

Far from having nothing to lose by making the confession, Madeiros stood to jeopardize his life. For while, to be sure, at the time of his confession he was under sentence for another murder, an appeal from this conviction was pending, which was in fact successful in getting him a new trial. Could anything be more prejudicial to an effort to reverse his conviction for one crime than to admit guilt for another?

Disclosures by Madeiros refute the theory that he was led to make his confession by the hope of money. The State conceded that there was no evidence that "aid of any description had been promised to Madeiros" on behalf of the defendants.

He knew the danger of a confession, for his conviction in the Wrentham case largely rested upon confessions made by him. Why should he be believed and suffer death when he confesses one crime and not be believed when he confesses another of the same character? Is not his own statement in accordance with the motives even of a murderer?

I seen Sacco's wife come up here (jail) with the kids and I felt sorry for the kids. (M. R. 303).

In the light of all the information now available, which is the more probable truth: that Sacco and Vanzetti or the Morelli gang were the perpetrators of the Braintree murders? The Morelli theory accounts for all members of the Braintree murder gang; the Sacco-Vanzetti theory for only two, for it is conceded that if Madeiros was there, Sacco and Vanzetti were not.

The Morelli theory accounts for all the bullets found in the dead men; the Sacco-Vanzetti theory for only one out of six. The Morelli explanation settles the motive, for the Morelli gang were criminals desperately in need of money for legal expenses pending their trial for felonies, whereas the Sacco-Vanzetti theory is unsupported by any motive.

BOOTY ACCOUNT

Moreover Madeiros' possession of $2,500 accounts for his share of the booty, whereas not a penny has ever been traced to anybody or accounted for on the Sacco-Vanzetti theory.

Can the situation be put more conservatively than this? Every reasonable probability points away from Sacco and Vanzetti; every reasonable probability points toward the Morelli gang.

Surely, no jury of disinterested and informed lawyers would hesitate for a moment to hold that, if the evidence concerning the Braintree crime and the Morelli gang came before a magistrate, he would be bound to commit for the action of a grand jury; that a grand jury would clearly be justified in presenting a true bill against them; and that on trial a judge would submit such facts for a jury's verdict.

The jury that tried and convicted Sacco and Vanzetti had no such facts before it; a jury trying them would in every likelihood find in the new facts controlling considerations for ascertaining the guilt or innocence of Sacco and Vanzetti.

How did these facts appear to Judge Thayer?

At the outset, the scope of Judge Thayer's duty toward the motion for a new trial based upon this new evidence must be kept in mind. It was not for him to determine the guilt of the Morellis or the innocence of Sacco and Vanzetti; it was not for him to weigh the new evidence as though he were a jury, determining what is true and what is false.

Judge Thayer's duty was the very narrow one of ascertaining whether there was new material fit for a new jury's judgment. May honest minds, capable of dealing with evidence, reach a different conclusion because of the new evidence, from that of the first jury? Do the new facts raise debatable issues?

Could another jury, conscious of its oath and conscientiously obedient to it, reach a verdict contrary to the one that was reached on a record wholly different from the present, in view of evidence recently discovered and not adducible by the defense at the time of the original trial?

OPINION ASSAILED

To all these questions Judge Thayer says, "No." This amazing conclusion he reached after studying the motion "for several weeks without interruption," and set forth in an opinion of 25,000 words!

By what is left out and by what is put in, the uninformed reader of Judge Thayer's opinion would be wholly misled as to the real facts of the case.

The disinterested inquirer could not possibly derive from it a true knowledge of the new evidence that was submitted to him as the basis for a new trial. The opinion is literally honeycombed with demonstrable errors, and infused by a spirit alien to judicial utterance.

Judge Thayer gives unrestricted authority to his self-justification by speaking of the verdict which convicted these men as "approved by the Supreme Judicial Court of this Commonwealth"

The Supreme Court never approved of the verdict; nor did it pretend to do so. The Supreme Court passed on technical claims of error, and "finding no error the verdicts are to stand." Judge Thayer knows this, but laymen may not. Yet Judge Thayer refers to the verdict as "approved by the Supreme Judicial Court."

I have sought to give in perspective, and so far as possible through the mouths of Judge and witnesses, the facts of a particular case which has attracted world-wide attention, and not to call into question the Anglo-American system of criminal justice in general, or that of Massachusetts in particular.

American criminal procedure has its defects. That we know on the authority of all who have made a special study of its sources. But its essentials have behind them the vindication of centuries. Only ignorant and uncritical minds will find in an occasional striking illustration of its fallibilities an attack upon its foundations or lack of loyalty to its purposes.

All systems of law, however wise are administered through men, and therefore may occasionally disclose the frailties of men. Perfection may not be demanded by law, but the capacity to correct errors of inevitable frailty is the mark of a civilized legal mechanism.

DE MILLE GLAD TO SEE BOSTON

From ham actor to one of the world's greatest motion picture directors was the story told by Cecil B. De Mille today to a Boston Evening American reporter.

And the metamorphosis took place in between visits to Boston, he said. "I like Boston. It hasn't changed," said De Mille.

De Mille came to Boston to lecture the motion picture class at Harvard on the problems of directing huge spectacles and their solutions.

Refraining from using the word industry, De Mille introduced a new slant on the flickering films today when he said: "I am glad to see Harvard, the oldest university in the country, recognizing the youngest of the arts."

He explained that the moving pictures is an art and a great influence on the country. He praised highly Harvard's plan to have the outstanding pictures of the past 15 years on record to show the progress of the films.

"I was here with a Charles Frohman show 27 years ago," said De Mille when talking about Boston.

A Startling Serial Story of Love, Terror and the Night Clubs

Jacqueline Kay, nineteen and attractive, comes to Boston from Houlton, Me., and obtains an engagement as singer at the Sea Shell, a cabaret. The proprietor, Julius Lupino, takes more than a friendly interest in her. She meets Tom Ware, who is informed by Lupino that Jacqueline is under his personal care. Lupino accompanying her home, she is accosted by a man, whom Lupino kills. The man is known as "The Lump," a criminal. Lupino is arrested and admits killing the man. Jacqueline leaves the Sea Shell, but is persuaded by Abe Gordon, Lupino's lawyer, to return. She does so and Lupino is released on bail. Ware warns Jacqueline against Lupino. Lupino tells the girl that he is ready to back her in a show, thus giving her her big chance. Jacqueline receives a note from Ware asking her to breakfast with him. She accepts.

Lupino tells Jacqueline that he knows of her breakfast with Ware. Admitting Ware is a nice boy, Lupino voices the hope that nothing will happen to him. Jacqueline realizes that Lupino has been spying on her.

Ware takes Jacqueline home. She invites him to breakfast in her apartment at noon the next day.

Ware confesses his love for Jacqueline and asks her to marry him. Jacqueline declines because she wants a career. She realizes that she is head over heels in love with Tom Ware.

CHAPTER 19

JACQUELINE, despite the artistic temperament of a singer, had a real flair for domesticity and, happily, the knack of cooking. A half hour before noon she was out of bed and performing skillful rites in the tiny kitchenette of her miniature apartment.

Precisely at 12 o'clock, when the rich aroma of bubbling coffee was perfuming the apartment, Tom Ware arrived for breakfast. For some unaccountable reason Jacqueline, in these intimate surroundings, had to struggle to overcome a disturbing shyness . . . a nervousness, gilded with glamour, that was something entirely new in the range of her experience. Tom Ware faced her, his hands outstretched.

He spoke her name in a voice slightly strange. Mysteriously, she sensed something altered about him, as though a swirling emotion trembled in his nerves. To herself she said secretly, "This is serious." Disorganization, like a contagious fever, suddenly reached her and . . . a drifting sensation . . . her knees were like water. She swayed slightly and he came to her, his arms closed around her.

The sustaining pressure of his embrace found her yielding without resistance. A weakness, a throbbing excitement, palpitated through every nerve, robbing her of strength. Her head was tight against his shoulder. For a matter of seconds neither spoke . . . stood there . . . stunned.

Then, slowly, Jacqueline lifted her face, her eyes closed. Without haste, he kissed her on the lips that, at first, were merely passive. A violence of feeling mounted amazingly. It was almost suffocation. With her lids still closed, Jacqueline found that she was returning the pressure of his lips.

The strange thing was that she was filled with a peace, a slow joyousness rather than, as she might have imagined, any hot embarrassment. The surprise of it, after a matter of seconds, drew them apart.

"I knew that was going to happen," Jacqueline said.

Tom Ware, of the two, looked the more startled. "You—I have been to Heaven," he replied slowly, as though he were recovering from some deep anaesthetic. "I don't know why I did that. I wanted to, of course, from the moment I met you; but I didn't even hope it would

3D TERM ISSUE IS DODGED BY COOLIDGE

Washington, April 26 (A.P.).—President Coolidge may not receive a letter from "The Forum," asking him to declare himself on the question of a third term.

This was indicated today when Edward T. Clark, private secretary, declared he had not made up his mind whether he would hand the letter to Mr. Coolidge.

Questions requesting an expression of the letter were submitted to the President at his conference with newspapermen today. He passed them up without comment of any kind.

New York, April 26 (A.P.).—John Bakeless, of "The Forum," today made public the contents of a letter sent to President Coolidge.

Bakeless said the letter emphasized that American tradition was against a third term; pointed out that the President's silence had "led to suspicion that he is willing to accept another nomination," and declared that "it is not fair to delay a positive statement too long."

"IOLANTHE" REPEATED AT REPERTORY THEATRE

The popularity of Gilbert and Sullivan's "Iolanthe" was once more demonstrated at the Repertory Theatre where Mount Saint Joseph Academy presented this tuneful operetta. The leading feminine roles were excellently taken by Mary Downey, Sarah Daly and Mrs. Joseph Callahan, while Hudson Carmody and Francis Rogers added appreciably to the smoothness of the performance. Other prominent parts were taken by Adam Owens, Vincent Moakler, John Cheever Kelly, Grace Monahan Hughes, Catherine M. Sullivan, Anna Guerney and Cunard Haugh, all of whom were happily cast.

PAPER IS BEST AD MEDIUM

So Declares Sir Charles Higham, British Expert, Addressing Hub Men

Advertising in newspapers brings a return immeasurably greater than advertising through any other medium, Sir Charles Higham, British advertising expert, told the members of the Advertising Club of Boston at the weekly club luncheon today.

"The newspapers have been a tremendous force in making this a happier, healthier and a cleaner world. They have done more for health than all the doctors and dentists combined."

Illustrating the success that come through newspaper advertising, when all other media have failed, Sir Charles told of the financial difficulties out of which he brought a British concern, the largest manufacturers of pickles, jams and marmalades in the world, and one in existence over 200 years.

This concern, he said, had been spending $500,000 a year in various types of advertising, but the returns had been insecure.

DESCRIBES GREAT TEST.

"I told them to make a three months' trial of three articles they wished to push, spending $30,000 in the newspapers of England," Sir Charles declared.

"In one month their business increased 86 per cent. At the end of the three months they undertook a $125,000 campaign which was so successful that it paid for itself."

The advertising expert declared that the tea tossed into Boston Harbor 150 years ago is presumably still there, "a monument to Boston courage."

"The success of tea drinking in the United States, however, is an indication that we are forgiven," he said. "One-sixth of all the tea in the world is brought to the United States. There are twice as many tea drinkers in the United States as there were four years ago. Out of 600,000,000 pounds grown in the world, the United States consumes 100,000,000.

"Eighteen years ago I started an London advertising agency with an idea that was new then and that is new today, namely, the idea of using all my clients' advertising appropriations in the newspapers.

ALL IN NEWSPAPERS.

"Four years ago I was authorized to spend $1,000,000 over a period of five years by the India Tea growers.

"For three years the campaign showed no progress, but now the tide has turned. I knew I would win out if my clients would stick to newspaper advertising.

"In the first three months of this year the imports of India tea into the United States totaled over 1,000,000 pounds weight more than in any three months during the past twenty-six years.

BOOMED TWO FAIRS.

"When I used newspapers two years ago for the British Board of Trade to get buyers to come from all over the world to visit the British Industries Fair, they came in greater numbers than ever, and for the last fair, held in February, this year in London, as a direct result of newspaper advertising in the United States and in practically every other country in the world, doubled the number of buyers who visited the fair and purchased $30,000,000 worth of goods.

"When one considers that the total cost of getting these buyers was only $125,000, one can realize how cheap and how profitable it is to use the modern newspaper.

"The press gives us the most effective method of reaching the largest number of people in the shortest space of time for the least amount of money.

"Nothing is ever likely to surpass it."

CAT, CHASING MOUSE, TURNS ON GAS

Fireman James E. Sullivan of Everett and his wife, whom he saved with her mother and aunt today when they were almost asphyxiated after a cat, in chasing mouse, brushed gas cocks in the kitchen open. He recognized her voice calling help over the phone. The cat and mouse both died.

FIREMAN RESCUES THREE

Hears Dying Wife Calling by Phone for Help; Saves Her and 2 Others

James E. Sullivan of the Everett fire department was on floor duty at the Central fire station today when the telephone rang and a weak feminine voice called faintly for help.

"Help! It's gas" was the only message that came over the wire, but the fireman recognized the voice as that of his wife. With several other firemen he made a mad dash for his home at No. 92 Central avenue, Everett, and found his wife, her mother and aunt unconscious from gas poisoning.

The firemen had an inhalator in their machine and they applied first aid treatment until physicians arrived. The doctors finally succeeded in reviving the three women, all of whom will recover.

In the kitchen the family cat and a mouse lay dead. The bodies of the two animals explained the situation.

In chasing the mouse about the kitchen the cat leaped upon cocks of the gas range and two of the cocks were opened wide.

Mrs. Sullivan was aroused by the noise in the kitchen, but she did not investigate. A short time later she was aroused by the smell of gas. Only partially conscious, she went to the room of her mother Mrs. Alice J. McCarthy. She found the older woman unconscious, and although barely able to move herself, she threw a chair through a window letting in a flood of fresh air doing to the floor above she found her aunt, Miss Catherine Brennan unconscious. She managed to open a window and then made her way to the telephone and called the fire station, after which she lapsed into unconsciousness.

Arrival of the firemen saved the lives of the three women.

FREED ON CHARGE OF STEALING CLOTHING

Paul Lane of the Back Bay was found not guilty in Municipal Court by Judge Murray of a charge of larceny of clothing valued at $1,000 from Mrs. Eleanor Felton, society matron of Chestnut Hill, Brookline. Lane told the judge he found the clothing in a cab which he and his sister hired, and he had returned it at the suggestion of his sister.

South is the dealer. What is the proper bidding and play?

In the next issue Mr. Whitehead will explain the salient points in the bidding and play of the above hand. Fill out your own chart and compare it with his method.

These hands must not be bid or played "Double Dummy," i.e., as though all four hands were exposed.

Yesterday's Hand as Played by Mr. Whitehead

Salient Points of the Bidding

West, holding at least two stoppers in the Club suit and adverse by both together with strong cards in the other three suits, bids one No Trump, which closes the bidding. An alternate declaration would have been an informatory double, but such double is rarely advisable in situations of this nature, particularly so when short in the Major suits, one of which would be the logical bid in response to the informatory double.

Salient Points of the Play

Trick 1. South wins with the King of Clubs to provide against the possibility of West's having bid No Trump with but the Queen and one Club. North's lead of the four of Clubs was either a singleton or the lowest of four cards, and if the lowest of four, West can avoid his ten. This possibility, however, remote, should be provided against, particularly with players who indulge in the unsound practice of bidding No Trump without a stopper in the suit adversely bid.

Trick 3. West wins the third round of Clubs at once, as he holds another trick in Clubs should West subsequently continue that suit.

Trick 10. West follows South's discard and blanks the King of Spades.

Trick 13. The careful following by West of South's discards here enables West to make the nine of Clubs and game. Had South in Trick 2 conducted the eight of Clubs instead of the Queen of Spades, West would also have discarded a Club and made the King of Spades instead of the nine of Clubs.

The Red Signal ~ Wedding Chimes ~ By Homer Banks

HER WEDDING DAY.—Rosalind awoke with a start. For a moment she lay crouched in bed, her eyes wandering around the strange room. The events of the past three days flashed through her mind—Manton's insistence that she leave her hotel to escape the attentions of Roger, the hurried midnight motor trip to Providence and an expensive suite, and— A cry escaped from her lips. She remembered it was her wedding day.

NOTE FROM MANTON.—She sat upright in bed, her heart pounding furiously. The involuntary cry brought the maid Manton had retained to her side. "It was just a nightmare," Rosalind explained hurriedly. The woman smiled sympathetically. "Mr. Cartwright is waiting in the lobby," she said. "I told him I wouldn't disturb you until you awoke. He brought a note from Mr. Manton, and says he has the car ready to accompany you back to Boston." Rosalind took the note and scanned it.

Copyright, 1927, King Features Synd., Inc.

ROSALIND LEAVES FOR BOSTON.—It was a brief request to return to the city. "Everything is in readiness for tonight, dear," the millionaire wrote. "Motor to my apartment with the maid. She has her instructions as to your wedding gown. The ceremony will be as simple as I could make it." Rosalind folded the note with an admixture of emotions, fear and doubt struggling for supremacy. She descended to meet Manton's secretary. He greeted her with a queer, twisted look of contempt, Rosalind thought.

MANTON GREETS HER.—The trip back to the city was made in silence. Somehow, Rosalind felt, her marriage to Samuel Manton would never actually take place—it was just a mask, something you read about. The millionaire met her at the door of his spacious apartment. His greeting was affectionate. Rosalind paused for a moment on the threshold and looked deep into his eyes.

STAGE SCREEN MUSIC

SPECTACULAR FILM FANTASY AT STATE

By LEO GAFFNEY

In shopping around for a story to fit the particular talents of Gloria Swanson you can liken the predicament of the weary film scout to the homeless lady who looks in vain to match that sample of dress goods. After exhausting all the stores and her own patience she simply must have a manicure to think it over. Let her see now . . . she could take that old blue taffeta, rip the seams, slyly stitch something to something else, get a pattern at Madame Needlewoff's and the rest would be simple. A new gown! And just the thing for that coming-out party.

Gloria Swanson

For her coming-out party with United Artists Miss Swanson will just such an ensemble. It is called "The Love of Sunya," with which a worried scenarist has finally emerged—flushed and excited, you imagine—after considerable remodeling of such creations as the Max Marcin stage production, "Eyes of Youth," a handful or two of Hollywood hokum and much dabbling of the occult sciences.

As the film unrolls on Egyptian State screen you are taken back 2000 and 2000 ago when Sunya (that's Gloria) was done to death in the Temple of the Scorching Flame, or something. In re-incarnation Sunya is a modern girl with three or four suitors. Unable to make up her mind which to choose, she is assisted by the ancient yogi, whose conscience was bothering him for having done the dirty work so long back.

Producing a crystal globe, the seer enables Sunya to take a peep into what would befall her if she married two of the boys. With one she is a dissolute opera singer; with the other she ultimately lands on the pavement, a cast-off rich man's plaything. The upshot of the crystal-gazing is a flying leap from the waiting arms of the fine young man whom she should have taken in the first place.

Of course all this happens at great length, but it all goes to show that a girl like Sunya can't be too careful.

Albert Parker's direction is generally admirable, much of the detail is nicely subtle and many of the scenes are elaborately set. Of the supporting cast, the acting of John Bolee, Pauline Garon and Anders Randolph is highly adequate. On the whole "The Love of Sunya" is a carefully made production that should provide plenty for the Gloria Swanson fans to talk about.

The State stage show features Hal Kemp and his band, and D'Alessandro, European baritone.

IMPROVING HIS MIND

PRIVATEERING

Ernest Torrence attempts to certain Pauline Starke in "Captain Salvation," the forthcoming film epic of the days of Yankee clipper ships.

'THE RED MILL' AMUSES AT ORPHEUM

Marion Davies Hollandaise—a piquant foreign creation that is glaringly new—that's the new Marion Davies in "The Red Mill," at Loew's Orpheum.

One associates Marion Davies with gowns—with costumes—with plays like "Beverly of Graustark" or "Lights of Old Broadway." But here is a new one—Marion Davies in pigtails and wooden shoes.

Her talents as a comedienne have the best opportunities they have had to date, and she makes the most of them, in the skating scenes where she drops through the ice to disaster and a frozen face—in struggle with her patent American ironing board that invades the sacred precincts of her Holland kitchen, and other hilarious details that vastly please the audience.

There is uproarious entertainment to a story that is gripping in its heart interest—the story of a little Dutch kitchen slavey who is catapulted into society and a strange love affair—who encounters with ghosts in a haunted mill and upsets a Holland town—all for the love of an Irish tourist, in a comedy vein and a green necktie.

William Goodrich directed the new story from a scenario by Frances Marion, based on the noted comic opera by Victor Herbert and Henry Blossom. Owen Moore plays the Irish hero in debonair style. George Siegman, famous screen villain, is as bad as ever in the role of the minister. Ducia Willem, Louise Fazenda and Karl Dane make an amusing comedy team in the new production, and Fred Gamboli, William Orlamond, Russell Powell, and other well-known favorites are included in the cast.

Vaudeville completes the bill.

Delightful apartments of every description and every location offered for rent in the Classified Ads every day. Classified pages 26 and 27.

In New Play

CARROLL McCOMAS

Comes next Monday to the Park Theatre as star of the drama, "The Night Hawk."

SCREEN PLAYER APPEARS IN PERSON AT STATE

Hugh Miller, who plays the part of the Hindu seer in Gloria Swanson's "The Love of Sunya," made a personal appearance at Loew's State last night, where the picture is playing.

"The Love of Sunya" is the first American picture Mr. Miller has worked in, and the occasion for his visit to Boston at this time is his role in "Pickwick," now at the Majestic.

RAE SAMUELS HEADS BILL AT KEITH'S

Rae Samuels, the "Blue Streak" of vaudeville, headlines an all-star bill at B. F. Keith's this week and from the generous applause accorded Miss Samuels by the opening night audience, she will score as one of the favorites of the season.

Miss Samuels has personality and individuality plus. Her song numbers brought down the house at the opening performance.

But to pick out an individual outstanding star on the Keith bill this week would be a difficult task. "The Spotlight Revue," a company musical tabloid sponsored by George Choos is an entire show in itself. The Cyclone Eight, Rae and Rose Lyte and Eddie Prints, in song and dance, present numbers certain to captivate Boston before the end of the week.

"What's the Idea" in the comedy hit of the bill, presented by Bert Ahr and Mercedes. It is a side-splitting comedy. Another attractive number is "Jeanie" the world's nicest star, in "Just a Sweet Child."

Carlton Emmy and his Mad Wag are an artistic comedy offering. James Kelso and Belle De Monde in an "up-to-the-minute" revue; the Donovan Girls, dainty misses in melody. Harry Seebach, the world's champion bag puncher, assisted by Harriet Seeback in "Fun in a Gym," and La Salle & Mack complete the bill.

Actors' Benefit

The 13th annual Actors' Fund Benefit performance will be given at the Colonial next Friday afternoon. Through the presence of so many stars and players enlisted in the attractions at the local theatres an excellent program has been arranged. The variety of offerings presages a perfection in entertainment. Every attraction playing in Boston will be represented by stars and leading players.

SMART COMEDY AT ST. JAMES

Now the Keith-Albee company at the St. James steps into the field of English comedy in Boston with "The Last of Mrs. Cheyney." Ina Claire starred in the original production of this elite comedy melodrama, which is both among the most recent and best of Frederick Lonsdale's annual plays.

With Shubert's stepping from costume drama to modern drawing-room sophistication for her second role with this popular stock company, scored again last night from the moment she entered in her smart violet georgette frock. She adds a fascinating delicacy to the role of the ambitious young society crook, with no little lapses of speech to betray her former environment as a shoplift.

Her accomplices, on the other hand, seem to have more definite and quite amusing earmarks as to their origin, the red uniformed person played by Franklin Parker especially. But then, what matter since the lady acts a lady and the male crooks appear in the play in the guise of butlers and other domestic capacities.

Nor does Walter Gilbert seem at all English in his role as the fickle social pet, Lord Arthur Jilling. He doesn't even affect a frock coat, as does Jack Westerman, though the latter does so probably because it adds to his comic characterization. Gilbert, like the other characters has some good and some lines, and these are to his advantage in playing this straight role in the face of so many character parts.

New Films

Norma Shearer in "The Devil Within" is announced as the feature at Loew's State, starting Monday May 2nd.

Lewis Stone in "The Notorious Mr. Pell" will be screened at the Olympia during the week of May 2nd.

Frank Hussey, B. C. sprint king, will face stiff opposition in his favorite event at the Penn Relays but he is confident of winning.

·LORD BURGHLEY·

GREATEST OF TRACK ATHLETES in this country and England numbering over 3,000 are to compete in the Penn Relay Carnival at Franklin Field, Philadelphia, on Friday and Saturday. The three athletes pictured here are listed as possible winners, Lord Burghley of Cambridge University, England, in the hurdles; Sabin Carr of Yale in the pole vault, and Frank Hussey of B. C. in the sprints.*

HUB BOYS FAIL TO STAND UP

By RINGSIDE

All the Greater Boston amateur boys were eliminated in the first rounds of battling in the national amateur championships which will come to a close tonight in the Arena.

Six New England boys have been lef' to uphold the distinction of the section. Whether these half dozen starters make much headway in the semi-final and final scramble remains to be seen.

The crop of boys from this section have gone money mad in the fistic arena and today there are few, if any, good simon pures in our neighborhood.

The boxing committee of the N. E. A. A. U. has come to a decision to start the bouts tonight at 7:30 to give the battlers and fans ample time to get home before the milkman in the morning. Twenty-four bouts are on the program for this evening's fireworks, sixteen being semi-finals and eight in the finals.

One of the most likely winners in the show is Thomas Lown of the Kennedy's Boys' Club, New York. Lown was winner of the 135-pound class last Spring, and he carries too many guns for the other battlers.

The following are the survivors in the various classes who will meet tonight in the semi-finals and the finals:

The New Yorker showed his skill to the fans when he stepped into the ring with our own Ray Cuskey of Chelsea in the 147 pound class. Ray was a promising looking lad until Tommy Lown smashed him with a volley of lefts and rights to the head and body.

Ray, although he protested when the referee stopped the bout, was unable to continue.

N. U. Has Fast Team in Penn Relays

With the fleetest relay team in its history, Northeastern University will be a favorite to win the technical school mile championship event at the Penn relays, at Philadelphia, Saturday.

During the Winter campaign, the Huskies defeated Colby twice, W. P. I. twice, M. A. C., Bates and New Hampshire, losing only to B. U. in their first race.

Northeastern has been represented only once at the Penn relays. In 1922 a Northeastern quartet, on which the present coach, Ed. Parsons, was leadoff man, captured third place in the technical school division, won by Carnegie Tech. Rensselaer was second.

These colleges with Georgia Tech, V. P. I., Colorado School of Mines, Alabama Tech and Brooklyn Poly will be Northeastern's chief rivals Saturday.

CRIMSON CREW IN TIME TRIAL TODAY

The Harvard varsity and junior varsity eights are engaging in their second time trial of the season over the mile and three-quarters course on the Charles River Basin today. Two lengths are being given the junior varsity by the varsity eight in the trial.

Coach Ed Brown has shifted his varsity lineup around for the trials. Jack Watts has replaced Jim. Perkins at stroke. Perkins moves to the bow position, where he takes the place of Oliver Ames, who moves to No. 6.

Guy Murcie, who has been rowing No. 5, moves to No. 7, where he takes the place of Bob Ladd.

Bill Saltonstall and Bill Emmett change places. This move puts Emmett at No. 2 and Saltonstall at No. 3.

No shifts were made in the second varsity.

The Biggest Moment in My Biggest Fight

By GEORGE WARD

I HAVE fought Harry Dudley, the Negro flash from the Pacific Coast, on two occasions, and it was the finish of the second bout that gave me more satisfaction than anything that has happened to me before or since in a ring sense.

Both our fights were at Laurel Gardens, Newark. The first time Dudley knocked me down once, and I dropped him twice. It seemed to me that I had won by a fairly conclusive margin. No decisions are given in New Jersey, you know, but the newspaper boys seemed divided in their opinions as to who was the victor.

There were a lot of arguments pro and con after the fight, but arguments settle nothing. So, it appeared that there was little else to do but rematch us. The promoters were quite willing to do that, for our previous scrap created so much talk that a capacity house was assured.

I don't suppose our second fight gave the spectators as much of a thrill as the first one did, for I won in a walk. Time after time I stepped inside Dudley's right swing, ripping him with my right uppercut. I knocked Harry down once—making the count three to one in the two battles—and he was a badly scarred and beaten boy when I was through.

It wasn't just the victory that gave me the biggest moment. I had fought chaps that I thought were a lot tougher than the Californian, and had won by as conclusive a margin against some of them.

Here was the thrill.

As soon as the fight was over the fans thronged to the ringside, lifted me on their shoulders, and carried me in triumph to my dressing room. Everyone has more or less of a touch of vanity in them, I guess, but it wasn't the hero stuff, altogether, that gave me my big moment, though it unquestionably helped a bit.

It was the unanimous expression of the crowd that I had won clearly and beyond a doubt. There were no judges or referee to say that I had earned the verdict but the crowd said it when they lifted me to their shoulders. They said it more clearly than any referee could have done.

CARRIGAN TO BUY A SHARE OF RED SOX

By NICK FLATLEY

Bill Carrigan, Red Sox manager, seems about to become a baseball magnate.

Manager Bill and Joseph Conway, who persuaded the Lewiston miracle man to come back to the game, will probably take over the stock of the late Palmer Winslow, director of the club, who passed away yesterday in Columbus.

Mr. Winslow, wealthy manufacturer and lifelong friend of President Bob Quinn, owned a goodly share of the Sox ball club, and it would be fitting and popular to have Boston capital and Carrigan baseball brains move into active ownership.

President Quinn's other associates in Columbus are wealthy, and could take over Winslow's holdings, but it will be a better thing for the club and the game here to have a dash of home control.

When Carrigan made his surprise re-entry last Winter it was freely rumored that he was buying part of the club. Bill has plenty of money and is a business man. It was natural that he would like to use himself as an investment, in addition to drawing down a big salary.

Joe Conway, president of the Horace Partridge Co., has been anxious to get into big league baseball for years. He tried the New England League last season, buying the Portland club, and dropped a lot of money there. That didn't discourage him, however.

He put the Carrigan proposition up to President Quinn when that magnate was certain that Bill would never come back to baseball. Bob had talked with the Lewiston hero and used all his persuasiveness.

He offered any salary that might be named, but that didn't change the Carrigan mind. It's a cinch that [illegible] Mister Conway had some strong and appealing argument when he put over the big deal.

President Quinn is in Columbus today, so no official announcement could be made for some time. Baseball deals, like other business, have [illegible] details [illegible]. But indications are that something definite will be made known within a short time.

The advancement of Carrigan to part ownership would help the ball team here in Boston, in fan opinion. Every baseball man in the village believes that Bill knows a little more about the game than any other mortal. Knowing that William was in on the club the boys would be sure that brighter days were ahead.

Boston fans appreciate the efforts of Bob Quinn to get himself a ball team. They know that his entire fortune is invested, and that most of it has been eaten away by the reverses of the past three tough years.

They feel that Carrigan, as a partner as well as manager, would help Bob get even with the world more quickly than anybody else could.

Munn Wins on Mat

Springfield, April 24 — Wayne "Big" Munn defeated Jac McL[illegible] gan of Canada in a mat bout here. Munn took the first fall in 13 minutes and the second in one minute. Both were gained with Munn's favorite hold, an inside crotch hold and body lift.

Sharkey Agrees to Box Pat McCarthy After Maloney Go

Paulino Ucsuden, the sad-faced Spanish woodchopper, was today suspended by the New York Boxing Commission for his refusal to keep his Boston engagement to box Ed Keeley of South Boston at the Argonne A. A.

The action of the New York Commission resulted when Paulino was placed on the blacklist here in Massachusetts. The Bay State Commission was unable to suspend Paulino on account of the fact he is not a licensed boxer here.

The suspension of Paulino means he must first make his peace with Matchmaker Eddie Mack of the Argonne Club before he will be permitted to box either in New York or Massachusetts. This is a kayo blow to the plans to pit the Spaniard against Jim Delaney or Jack Dempsey in New York.

SHARKEY TO BOX McCARTHY.

One more obstacle in the path of the Sharkey-Maloney bout was removed today when Johnny Buckley, manager of the conqueror of Harry Wills, appeared before the New York commission and agreed to have his protege go through with his bout with Pat McCarthy of Roxbury following the New York match with Maloney.

Buckley told the commission that information received in the case was that Mike McTigue was the only reason why Sharkey stepped out of the Chicago match.

"I understand Sharkey and McCarthy will draw $300,000 in one of the ball parks in Chicago this Summer," said Buckley, "and we are very anxious to pick up that money. We will hop out to the Windy City as soon as we get through with the Maloney match."

This arrangement was satisfactory to the New York commission.

The New York commission also took official recognition of Jim Maloney's agreement with Matchmaker Tom Goodwin of the Suffolk A. A. to box Tom Heeney at Braves Field following the Sharkey tussle.

The contract held by Walter [illegible] of Cleveland for Maloney to box Johnny Risko before he takes on Sharkey is the only matter to be disposed of before the big heavyweights settle the question of supremacy. The New York Commission [illegible] in view of the fact it will be aired in court Friday. It is not believed that the Cleveland promoter will be granted an injunction.

HUDKINS TO MEET MELLO.

Ace Hudkins, Nebraska Wildcat, has been reinstated in New York. This clears the way for him to meet Al Mello of Lowell at the Queensboro Stadium on June 30 and for him to tackle Sergeant Sammy Baker at the Polo Grounds on July 12.

Cobb, Tobin and Todt at Howley Meeting

In his usual clever manner, Manager Bill Carrigan pulled away from the plate at the "Dan Howley Day" meeting down in East Weymouth but he sent in two pinch hitters, Johnnie Tobin and Phil Todt.

Tyrus Raymond Cobb, representing the Athletics and along with Tobin and Todt, received a wonderful reception from the fellow-townsmen of his former "Right Eye," quiet Dan Howley.

CHANGES IN B.C. NINE PLANNED

Coach Jack Slattery is going to present a new lineup when his Boston College nine tackles Manhattan College at University Heights tomorrow afternoon.

The Eagle mentor is not satisfied with the present aggregation. He has been experimenting all during the Southern trip and is prepared to name the players that will represent the B. C. varsity for the rest of the schedule.

The men who were not taken on the trip are back with the squad and fighting harder than ever for positions. Some of these boys are bound to break in before long.

Paddy Creedon is one of the scrubs who is due to get on the first nine. Slattery is planning on using Creedon at second base in place of Clinton. The Brockton flash met the team in the South and played three fine ball games down there. His sticking was good but he has not fully recovered from the [illegible] has [illegible] him back since the close of the football season.

This seems to be the only change that will be made in the infield. [illegible] is a back to his old stride. [illegible] is playing better ball than ever before in his career.

Bouts Last Night

London—Gypsy Daniels, Wales, won the [illegible] heavyweight championship of Great Britain from Tom Berry, London, 20.

Providence—Al Foreman, Washington, D. C., awarded decision over Joey Williams, [illegible] 8. Bout between Joe Glick, New York, and Frankie Anderson, Wyoming, declared no contest.

Chicago—Joey Sangor, Milwaukee, defeated Henry Lenz, Chicago, 10.

Scranton, Pa.—Cowboy Jimmy Owens, Oklahoma City, stopped Eddie Lyke, Scranton, 3.

Jackson, Wis.—Pete Bross, Great Falls, Mont., scored a technical knockout over Dave Ostroy, Duluth, Minn.

Newark, N. J.—Billy Petrelle vs. Cuddy de Marco bout stopped by referee in fourth round for stalling.

BILL CUDDY TO RESIGN RING JOB

'Father Bill' Will Quit as Chairman of A. A. U. Boxing Committee In November

William H. Cuddy, chairman of the A. A. U. boxing committee and supervisor of the National "pure" tourney now in progress at the Arena, has announced that he will resign his position at the expiration of four years of service next November.

"Father Bill," as he is known to thousands of boxers and sport followers in this country and abroad, has directed the last six national championships, managed the last American Olympic boxing team, was one of the leaders in organizing the Pan-American Boxing Association and brought teams of boxers from Great Britain, Sweden and Denmark to this country during his term of office.

In spite of all he has done for amateur boxing in this country Bill was to be left off the next United States Olympic boxing committee, according to reports, and he decided to step out in order to prevent any friction in the organization.

He will continue, however, to take an active interest in the amateur boxing shows sponsored by the St. Joseph's T. A. S. of the West End, of which he has been president for many years.

As manager and chairman of the A. A. U. boxing committee, Cuddy conducted the most successful tourneys in the history of the organization. He turned thousands of dollars yearly into the treasury and but for the large sums realized through Cuddy's shows, the A. A. U. would be unable to sponsor such non-paying sports as wrestling, swimming and gymnastics.

Cuddy has devoted the greater part of his time to amateur athletics. He was president of the N. E. A. A. U. for years and has always been interested in the "simon pure" boxers.

The team he took to the last Olympics was the best that ever represented the U. S. in international competition and his handling of the boxers was highly commended.

Hahn Won't Race Wide Again

Falls City, Neb., April 26 (A.P.)—Explaining he could not get into condition by June 12, and that it would not be worth while to train for a single race, Lloyd Hahn of Falls City, star Boston A. C. distance runner, said he would decline a request by Governor McMullen that he race Edvin Wide, the Swedish schoolmaster, in Chicago June 12.

The race was planned as the feature event of an athletic carnival in Chicago for the benefit of the Swedish National Tuberculosis Sanitarium at Denver. Hahn defeated Wide several weeks ago in a mile race at New York.

M'TIGUE 6 TO 5 FAVORITE TO BEAT PAT M'CARTHY

New York, April 26.—Mike McTigue has been installed 6 to 5 favorite to defeat Pat McCarty in their scheduled ten-rounder on the monster Kiddie Camp Fund card sponsored by Sheriff Charles W. Culkin, which will be staged in the New Madison Square Garden May 9. A gob of the coin of the realm is offered by Mike's horde of Irish followers. He may climb through the ropes as high as 8 to 5.

Dan Carroll, manager of Jim Maloney, informed Matchmaker Jess McMahon yesterday that the McCarty rooters will come in droves from Boston and that they will wager all they own on Pat, so sure are they McCarty will trounce Bowld Michael.

BERNSTEIN DEFEATS TRACY IN 10 ROUNDS

Buffalo, N. Y., April 26 (A.P.)—Jack Bernstein of Yonkers won by a decision here last night over Bobby Tracy of Buffalo in 10 rounds. They weighed 131 and 134 respectively.

LEE AND BAKER BOTH SLUGGERS

Two of the most colorful welterweights in the game—George Kid Lee of Worcester and Sergt. Sammy Baker of New York—are to meet in a 10 round bout for the Suffolk A. A. at the Arena next Monday night and their meeting is attracting the attention that Boston always bestows on welterweight bouts of merit.

Lee's attractiveness may be traced to his gameness. The Worcester Irishman was extremely unpopular here for a time, probably due to the fact that he held a decision and a victory on a foul over Al Mello, one of the most popular boxers this city has ever known. When they met for the third time, however, and when Lee stood up under a barrage of blows and fought back round after round, to make one of the best welterweight contests seen here in a number of years, he became immensely popular.

In addition to possessing gameness, Worcester George is very fast and clever, with an awkward bounding style that is almost sure to bother Baker. He is training for the match in Worcester.

Baker's attractiveness lies in the dynamite concealed in his glove. The sergeant is said to have the best right hand in the business, and with that right hand to lead him, he has scored victories over Eddie Roberts, Jack Zivic, Tommy Freeman and many other first-line welterweights.

HELEN WAINWRIGHT MARRIES ORGANIST

Dallas, Tex., April 26 (A.P.)—Helen Wainwright, former amateur woman diving champion, was married to Leonard Holland, Dallas Theatre organist, at Fort Worth, April 13, it became known today.

Miss Wainwright met Holland while appearing as a member of a swimming team headed by Gertrude Ederle, first woman to swim the English Channel.

PIRATES RELEASE FARR, CATCHER, TO COLUMBIA

Pittsburgh, Pa., April 26 (A.P.)—Tommy Farr, recruit catcher, has been released under option by the Pittsburgh Pirates to the Columbia, S. C., club of the South Atlantic League. He came to the Pirates from Burlington, Ia., of the Mississippi League.

DEMPSEY WILL FIGHT SHARKEY OR MALONEY

By DAVIS J. WALSH

New York, April 26.—Jack Dempsey has declared himself. He is coming back.

The writer learned this today on unimpeachable authority and the same source of information disclosed the fact that Dempsey will bar no man, except Paulino, the latter being deemed unworthy of the ex-champion's consideration.

I understand, too, that Dempsey's announcement has been in the hands of Tex Rickard for at least three weeks, and that the promoter, with a mysterious intimation that he will have "an important announcement about Dempsey later in the week," merely is withholding the news until the cloak and suit men will be unable to stand the suspense no longer. Rickard, it seems, is to be found guilty again of the charge of being a first-class showman.

Further evidence for the indictment was furnished this morning when he informed the boys that a certain "mysterious stranger" was enroute East to represent Dempsey. The gentleman in question is Gene Normile, who is about as mysterious as a billboard advertisement.

Normile will remain in New York as a Liaison contact between Dempsey and Rickard until such time as Jack decides to forsake California for the land of the san, which is here. My information today is that Dempsey will reach New York about five days before the Jimmy Maloney-Jack Sharkey fight, scheduled for May 19.

The "work" will then go in for Dempsey to challenge the winner, with the ultimate survivor to go on to the championship meeting with Tunney.

Rickard previously has held out for Dempsey to meet Paulino, so that he would have two sets of finalists and an alternate challenge in the event that neither Maloney nor Sharkey show anything but the right idea. But Dempsey has read Paulino right off the gallows.

"What would I get in meeting that guy?" he is quoted as having demanded of friends. "If he is as big a bum as they say he is, I can't prove anything by licking him. I'll be willing to take on the Sharkey-Maloney winner as the best man in the field and then go after Tunney."

If he can make his present plans stand up, he will have at least a half million dollars to show for his comeback and—he fondly believes—the title.

OPEN CLASSES ONLY AT ST. JOE'S SHOW

An all open amateur boxing tournament will be the weekly feature of the St. Josephs T. A. S. at Commercial Hall, Bowdoin Square, next Saturday night. The novices will not make their appearance for an other week.

The classes on the card include 112, 118, 126, 135, 147, 165 and heavyweight. The 165 pound class will be new on account of the fact that numerous boys are unable to make the 160 pounds limit.

MUNN TO FACE M'PHERSON

Wayne Big Munn, University of Nebraska football star, will be out to prove to fans at the Grand Opera House on Thursday night that he is staging a real comeback. The big fellow is in wonderful shape and in his last few matches has won with his big slam like he did when he was at the top of the ladder.

He will have for his opponent here Scotty McDougal, who wrestles as Jack McPherson. Scotty made quite a hit here in his former matches, as he gives the fans his best at all times, and as one Western sport writer said, it is worth the price of admission just to see Scotty jump once. He has a habit of jumping three or four feet in the air when he gets out of a hold.

Pat McGill, Irish champion, will try to prove to Abe Kaplan that Irish wrestlers have it on Jewish wrestlers. Their match is set down for best two falls in three with a 90-minute time limit.

Dr. Sarpolis will hook up with Sam Skorsby in another match on the card that is billed for one fall.

John Spellman, former Brown University star, will meet Ivan Ludlow, sensational Russian wrestler, making his first Boston appearance this year.

School Notes

Coach Jimmy Duffy of Jamaica Plain High has three pitchers ready to take the hill against Brookline at the Cypress Street Grounds today.

Elmer Sanborn is pitching for Waltham against Brighton High at Brighton. Under the agreement between the coaches, a player who has been removed from the game can be put back in at any time.

The other game scheduled for today finds Latin School in action against Belmont High at Belmont.

Reports that Jim Mansfield is to be appointed coach at Newton High were denied at that school. Clifford Brownell, director of physical education at Newton declares that he knew nothing about Mansfield's coming to Newton and that nothing would be done about appointing a coach until June.

The Cambridge Latin-Everett High game at Everett Saturday is attracting much interest among the schoolboy sports followers. The winner of this game will be out in front in the Suburban League race, with a fine chance of grabbing the championship.

ROLAND LOCKE STEPS A FURLONG IN 21.3

Lincoln, Neb., April 26 (A.P.)—Roland Locke, former Nebraska sprinter and world record holder of the 220-yard dash, stepped the furlong in 21 3 seconds on the Husker oval last evening in preparation for his matched race with Jackson Schols and Henry Russell at the Penn relays Saturday.

The Nebraska flash will leave Wednesday for the Eastern Track Carnival.

Leader Shifts Yale Crew

New Haven, Ct., April 26.—Yale's head coach, Ed Leader, altered six positions in the two varsity eights for the triangular regatta with Pennsylvania and Columbia, scheduled on the Housatonic next week. Leader's record of unbroken victories may be smashed.

Three varsity oars—Hudson, Griggs and Cannon—were sent to the second eight, and Wardwell, Bartholomew and Taylor of the second were assigned seats in the first. Warren was moved from No. 7 to No. 5 in the second boat.

The new makeup of the varsity eight follows:

Stroke, Laughlin; No. 7, Wardwell; No. 6, Bartholomew; No. 5, Warren; No. 4, Quarrier; No. 3, Captain Robinson; No. 2, Taylor; bow, Mosle; coxswain, Stewart.

McCarthy Shoots at McTigue's Whiskers

By Jack Conway

"THE gang is all here," remarked Mr. Boston as he strolled into the sporting department today, accompanied by Jim MacDonald, business agent of Pat McCarthy and various other box fighters of note, and T. Milton Goodwin, who is known to his playmates as "The Tex Rickard of New England."

"There's still quite a chill in your Boston air," said MacDonald as way of opening. "It is much milder in New York and Philadelphia.

"You like the atmosphere of those places?" queried Mr. Boston rather indignantly.

"I'm not interested in atmosphere," replied MacDonald in a matter of fact tone. "I will admit, though," he went on, "that I like the kind of money they use paying off fighters in New York. And they do tell me that those Philadelphia promoters are well heeled in a financial way and are preparing to take the old rubber off their bank rolls.

MR. BOSTON

"So you have been traveling, James," interrupted T. Milton Goodwin. "I have been at a loss to understand why you have not had the kindness to offer me any of your palookas for my shows at the Arena."

"I don't like that word palooka," declared MacDonald with great feeling. "Mr John F. Buckley and Mr. Dan Carroll may manage a few palookas, but personally I only handle grand opera performers. And as for why I have not been permitting the public of New England to gaze upon the young men under my direction it is a rather simple one.

"NEW YORK city is a little place with about 6,000,000 or so regular customers in addition to another million or so birds who wish to be amused. My Patrick J. McCarthy, the headliner of my stable, has got that big audience eating right out of the palm of his hand.

"I respectfully call attention to the fact that McCarthy has boxed more often in Madison Square Garden this year than either Shamus Maloney or Jack Sharkey.

"First Patrick polished off one Sully Montgomery who on one occasion left Maloney in a horizontal position in the ring at Mechanics Building. Later he stepped in and knocked off Matt Adgie of Philadelphia.

"And now"—

MacDonald paused for dramatic effect.

"He's going to tell us a good one about one of his palookas," said the cynical T. Milton Goodwin.

"Don't interrupt the gentleman, please don't," pleaded Mr. Boston.

"I don't see any gentleman," replied T. Milton.

"A palooka matchmaker can't distinguish a gentleman from a ham and egg manager of divers," resumed MacDonald. "But as I was saying my Patrick J. McCarthy has hit the crest of his wave of popularity in New York. On May 9 he will battle Mike McTigue in the feature ten-round bout of a monster charity show at Madison Square Garden. He will get fifteen grand or so for beating McTigue."

"I thought you said it was a charity show," insisted Mr. Boston.

"So I did," responded MacDonald, "but the charity will begin after my Patrick and the other biffers have been paid off. Charity is a wonderful thing, especially when it begins at home."

MR. BOSTON began speaking again.

"I'll admit McCarthy is a riot in New York. I always thought Pat was a good fighter, but for some unexplained reason he never showed at his best in Boston. Guess it was a case of being too anxious to make good before the home town gang. He sure goes big in New York. There are folks over there who figure Pat can beat any of the contenders for a shot at Tunney.

"After his bout with McTigue, McCarthy will step into Philadelphia for another meeting with Adgie. Then on to Chicago, where he will battle Jack Sharkey at one of the ball parks. They say Jack and Pat will draw $300,000 in the Windy City. Looks as though there will be all-Boston bouts throughout the country this Summer, with Sharkey and Maloney and Finnegan and Chapman down for New York dates, and Sharkey and McCarthy heading a Chicago program.

"Guess I'll have to be prepared to spend the Summer on the road. Gosh darn it, though, but it is hellish hot in those Pullmans when the mercury is doing the black bottom up around 90."

Hub Four-Ball League Season Opens Today With 5 Tilts on Card

Four Ball League Matches

Commonwealth at Woodland.
Brae Burn at Belmont Springs.
Wollaston at The Country Club.
Charles River at Winchester.
Weston at Oakley.

By BILL GRIMES

The 1927 season of the Boston Four Ball League gets under way today, with ten teams competing for the title now in the possession of the Brae-Burn Country Club.

Due to the new system of scoring, the race for the title will be far closer than in the past and will be sustained right through the season.

Bill Grames

Once again, Brae Burn appears to have the call for high honors with the Country Club favored to finish in the runner-up position. The Brae Burn team is practically the same as went through to the championship last season.

Emory Stratton and Eddie Stimpson will be the No. 1 Brae Burn pair. Stratton and Stimpson were the third highest point winners last year. Ray Gorton and Arthur Corwin won more points than any pair in 1926 and they will prove equally as tough this year, while Moser and Russ and Hutchinson and Kerns are far stronger than the average combinations.

The Country Club will be without the services of Frank C. Newton, the New England champion and the veteran Joshua Crane, who are abroad, but in Henry Wilder and Percy Gilbert it has two capable substitutes who will strengthen the Clyde Park team.

Unlike last season, the Country Club is putting its strongest team in the field at the start instead of being forced to play without Herbert Jaques and B. W. Estabrook as was the case a year ago.

There will be many new faces on the Charles River team, including Frank Crafts and Whitney and E. E. Fogg and although Billy McPhail will be missed, Charles River should give a better account of itself than last Spring, but Belmont Spring, without such stars as Fred J. Wright, Jr., the State champion, Tom McGinn, Milt Vedder and Woodie Allan, appears to be in for a tough season.

During the contests that Francis Ouimet and Jesse Guilford are available. Woodland will be represented by a formidable team but the reverse is true when the two former National champions are out of the lineup.

Weston and Oakley will offer practically the same lineups as last year, while Allie Danforth will replace Ted Learnard at Commonwealth, teaming with Ted Keefe.

The loss of Frank McGrath, whose untimely death last Winter nipped a promising golf career in the bud, Fr. Waters and Ted Tewksbury has noticably weakened Wollaston.

B. U. STUDENTS PRAISE AND HONOR ATHLETIC TEAMS

Close to 8,000 B. U. students gathered at the Boston Arena today to attend the second annual all-university assembly. The athletic teams that have represented the school the past season were well remembered in praise and with diplomas. All the members of the varsity football, basketball, track, cross-country pistol and rifle teams were awarded the tokens of honor.

OVER 3,000 IN PENN RELAY GAMES

The [illegible] will see the best of the [illegible] major outdoor track carnivals [illegible] starting in mid-April when the annual Penn Relays at Franklin Field, Philadelphia, will draw more than [illegible] entries to participate in [illegible] sports.

Many collegiate titles will be decided [illegible] inter-collegiate decathlon [illegible] championship awarded and the first [illegible] drawn on the coming track and field season.

Nearly [illegible] will be well represented [illegible] from Harvard, Boston [illegible] and Tufts University. Brown [illegible] Dartmouth [illegible] being entered, with a possibility of [illegible] being added.

The [illegible] of the outstanding performers from this section will [illegible] on hand from Harvard, Yale, Princeton, Cornell and Pennsylvania. All Americans due to compete [illegible] will not be able to make the trip.

LORD BURGHLEY STAR.

The most colorful [illegible] entry in these games is [illegible] Lord Burghley, captain of the Cambridge University team. This titled athlete burst into prominence after the last Olympiad when, with only two sessions of professional instruction in hurdling, both from Harry Hillman of Dartmouth, he became a timber-topper of the first order.

While still a novice, he won the 400 meter hurdles in the Penn Relays in 1925, and placed in the 120-yard sticks. He later returned to this country again and defeated the best of our Eastern collegiate hurdlers. He is the British champion at both high and low hurdles.

There will be a series of special events at the relays this year, which have drawn such stars as Roland Locke of Nebraska, Hector of Michigan, Hussey of B. C., Schols, Olympic record holder, and Hank Russell, formerly of Cornell and double intercollegiate titleholder.

CARR AFTER RECORD.

Sabin Carr will endeavor to establish a new world's outdoor mark in the pole vault. The Yale man already holds the indoor figure and is conceded a fine chance of creating a new height at this art.

Boston College in addition to Frank Hussey, will have entered several relay teams. Of these, the two-mile team, which has an enviable record, appears to be an almost certain winner.

Boston University's relay outfit, with two years of victory in the Penn relay races behind it, will return with only one regular, George Lermey, from the lineup. George is at present indulging in baseball.

Tony Lansky of Georgetown, also South Boston, [illegible] the intercollegiate decathlon last year, but has since been graduated. Competition in this, as in all events, promises to be fiercer than ever this year.

Munson A. C. Seek Games

The Munson A. C. of Cambridge are looking for games with any of the 18-20 year-old teams in the State. Would like to hear from Town Fives, Cambridge Rindge, Dorchester Speedways and Auburn A. A. Communicate with John Stankovich, No. 212 Windsor street, Cambridge or phone Porter 0194-W.

Inside Golf

To grasp as quickly as I can give it to you, the main divisions of the golf swing—practically [illegible] common sense [illegible] tion. Take a position — [illegible] wood club and stand facing an imaginary ball. Stand erect. Disregard the club for the moment. Place the feet 10 to 12 inches or so apart. Have the toes on a line with each other, positioning for the ordinary square stance. Let the toes turn out ward slightly.

Hold the club in the left hand only. Now bring the club up to the ball, using the left hand only. The ball should be on a spot directly off the left heel. Stand erect, weight equally on your feet. Now bring your right hand up to the shaft. This will cause a slight dropping of the right shoulder since the right hand must reach a little to get over it. Try that several times and observe how the shoulders appear to stoop slightly.

Golf Notes

Willie Ogg is receiving congratulations from his thousands of golf friends for holing off from the eighth tee at the Worcester Country Club. Reports have it that the same Willie is playing the best golf of his career.

Miss E. W. Allen, who has been playing with the Central District team, left today on a trip to Europe. Mrs. R. M Gardiner will take Miss Allen's place on the Central team.

The Inter-City team committee will be composed of Mrs. R. F. Kimball, who will act as chairman, Mrs. E. H. Baker, Jr. Mrs. Hugh Bancroft, Miss Francis Stebbins and Mrs. F. A. Stanwood.

The W. G. A. has appointed Mrs. F. A. Stanwood of Worcester, Mrs. J. B. Sweetser and F. Lord Hallowell of the Country Club, to act as the committee on prizes for this season. The committee will select all the prizes offered for W. G. A. events, including the mixed foursome championships.

Mrs. J. Motte Hallowell of the Country Club is organizing a W. G. A. Summer league, in which teams from Pocasset, Woods Hole, Scituate, Marion, Chatham and Plymouth will compete.

Mrs. L. H. Dalton of Southern won a fine victory over Miss E. W. Allen of Central at the Weston Country Club. Miss Allen was one up at the turn but the little Southern player squared the match and then won by a fine putt on the home green. Incidentally it was Mrs. Dalton's third consecutive victory.

Wilfred Ouimet writes from New York that he will be on hand next week for the Woodland Golf Club Spring four ball open tournament. Paired with Eddie Lowery, Ouimet won the low gross at Woodland a year ago, with a 74 and as both he and his partner [illegible] they are favored to [illegible]

Light Work for Jim During First Week

By J. D. VAN BRAKLE

Long Branch, N. J., April 26.—Jimmie Maloney, Boston heavyweight boxer, has arrived in this city to train for his coming match with Jack Sharkey in New York City on May 19.

With him are his manager, Leo Carroll, and Richard "Honeyboy" Finnegan, with whom he will train for speed. The party was met by Anthony Cavaj, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, on behalf of that organization, and the city officials.

A special suite at the Carroll Grant Hotel had been reserved for the trio and was decorated with baskets of flowers. Letters of good wishes were waiting their arrival.

Maloney's trainer, Jerry Gardiner, and his rubber, Mike Capelli, arrived later to take care of the fighter's well being.

The first week of training will consist solely of long walks through the country, batting [illegible] and over outdoor [illegible]. The [illegible] during period will [illegible] the [illegible] next week, the heavy work will begin.

This will take place in the local Ocean Park casino beside the Atlantic Ocean, where Dan Maher, local fight promoter, has prepared the large gymnasium for the training camp. The boxing and sparring will be done at the gym.

The first after washing up from the motor trip from New York, went to the dining room of the hotel. Maloney ordered a large steak and all [illegible] it. It's a treat, says Carroll, as in first-class shape.

Maloney was in this city prior to his setto with Delaney and found the sea air made the food disappear in large portions. It was partly on this account that he chose Long Branch as the scene of his readying for the coming fight.

Maloney looks to be in the pink of condition. He is the same clean-cut fighter that he was when he was here before. He is reticent about expressing his prospects, although he has little doubt that he will come out of the fight with Sharkey one step nearer the crown now gracing the brow of Gene Tunney.

Doughnuts Must Be Perfectly Fried

By MARTHA LEE

ONE of our club members said the other day she thought that I did not approve of doughnuts since I had given no recipes for them. I do approve of them when they are properly fried, which only means that the temperature of the fat must be right and they must be drained on brown paper

Here are some recipes that I am sure you can use successfully:

Crullers—Add to the doughnut mixture two tablespoons butter. Roll one-quarter inch thick. Cut in pieces four inches long and two inches wide. Make two slits in each, twist slightly and fry in hot fat.

New England Crullers—Two eggs, three-quarters cup milk, one tablespoon melted butter, three cups flour, three level teaspoons baking powder, one-half teaspoon ground cinnamon or nutmeg, one cup sugar, one-third teaspoon salt.

Beat the eggs till light and mix them with the milk and butter. Sift together two of the flour, sugar, salt, baking powder and the spice. Add and beat the two mixtures. Roll out, cut into rings and fry in hot fat till golden brown. Drain well and dust with sugar.

Crullers No. 2—One-half cup butter, one cup sugar, two eggs, one cup milk, three cups flour, one level teaspoon salt, three level teaspoons baking powder, one-third teaspoon grated nutmeg.

Beat the butter and sugar together, add the beaten eggs and milk, then the flour, salt, baking powder and nutmeg sifted together. Roll out and fry as above, drain on clean paper and sprinkle with sugar.

Doughnuts—Three eggs, one cup sugar, one teaspoon salt, one cup milk, three cups flour, one level teaspoon baking powder, one-half teaspoon soda, one-half teaspoon cinnamon, one tablespoon melted butter, one cup mashed potatoes, one cup flour. Beat the eggs, add the sugar, salt, milk, potatoes, spices and butter. Sift the baking powder with the flour and add to the first mixture. Mix thoroughly but lightly and roll out on lightly floured board. Cut with doughnut cutter and fry in deep fat. If sweet milk is used, a little soda and use four teaspoons baking powder.

Raised Doughnuts—Four cups pastry flour, one cup sugar, one teaspoon salt, one cup milk, one cup water, one yeast cake, four tablespoons shortening, three eggs.

Mix dry ingredients. Have water and milk lukewarm, dissolve yeast cake in liquid, mix with dry ingredients, beating well. Add shortening, beat well again, then your eggs well beaten. Cover and put in warm place overnight. In morning, add enough flour to handle, cut with doughnut cutter, lay on floured board and let raise for one hour, then fry in hot fat.

Nut Doughnuts—One and one-half cups sugar, four tablespoons shortening, one and one-half cups milk, two eggs, four teaspoons baking powder, one teaspoon lemon extract, one-half teaspoon salt, flour to make a soft dough.

Cream shortening, add sugar gradually, and eggs well beaten, add dry ingredients alternately with milk, beginning and ending with flour, using just enough flour to make a soft dough that can be handled. Cut with cutter and fry in hot fat. Heat fat until crumb of bread becomes golden brown in sixty seconds.

Raised Doughnuts — One cup milk, one-quarter yeast cake, one tablespoon lukewarm water, one cup sugar, one teaspoon salt, one tablespoon shortening, one egg, flour enough to make a stiff batter. Soak the yeast cake in the lukewarm water. Scald the milk, add sugar, salt and shortening, and when lukewarm add the yeast and beaten egg, then flour enough to make a stiff batter. Beat well, cover and let rise in a warm place until light. Turn out on a floured board, knead slightly, roll out one-half inch thick, cut with a floured cutter, let rise again and fry in deep fat. Drain on soft paper and sprinkle with powdered sugar.

Many GOOD WOMEN lead men Into TEMPTATION (inadvertently) and then, At the LAST MOMENT, deliver them From EVIL (not quite so inadvertently).

WIVES, it seems, often do their very BEST WORK in their own HOME TERRITORY. It is not the YOUNG GIRLS,

But old HUSBANDS that have to be SAVED.

Don't Let Season Blind Senses

An Authority on the Problems of Love and Marriage

LITTLE words those days that couples are seen everywhere on the beach, in the park, the top of the bus—sitting whispering and gazing often gazing into every object given.

Have you ever noticed how you never hear a word of love from the lips of a married man or woman? Why? Because they have ceased to love. Love is a thing that must be nourished and cherished or it will die. Some men and women will have it as long as they live, others will not. It depends entirely on their natures—individual and natural temperament.

Youth and love and Springtime time are synonymous and go hand in hand, but love is not confined to youth alone. It may be found in the heart of the old man and woman as well as the young man and woman who have just met.

Springtime is really a mood as well as a season. It is the season of rebirth, of nature in the world of nature. It causes us to go out of doors to greet Spring and her friendliness. We feel the urge the birds feel when they sing their love songs and start their love nests.

Let us enjoy the call to sociability and friendliness, but refuse to take it too seriously. Friendliness leaves no regrets. An over-hasty marriage—an unwise love affair—may leave lifelong regrets.

Love's mating season is the year round. The Spring impulse is only part of love. Its enduring feel is July, October, bleak December. If the man who fascinates you today at all interests you next Spring—if you and he remain by that time pals and friends as well as sweethearts—you may be safe in responding to that emotional lift next spring, which urges you to an (interesting wedding.

If you marry a Right Man, and you and he are true to the daily round of duties and self-sacrifices involved by the wedding ring in time your very souls should become welded together, and the attraction of your natural love will endure with sweet mode of renewal like the joy of returning Springtime.

Correct Manners Explained

PLACING A MAN'S WRAPS.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

What is a woman to do when entertaining a gentleman in her home, is it proper for her, as the hostess, to assist him with his topcoat when she is handing it to him when he is leaving? Also, is it proper for her to help him with his topcoat in the public gathering of any kind where wraps are removed?

A READER.

NO, it is never proper for a woman to assist a man with his wraps, his coat or muffler whether in her own home or in a public place, such as a theatre. She should not even take them from him when he comes to her home, nor should she hand them to him when he is going. When he enters her home she indicates to him where he is to put his hat and coat, and he puts them there, with no help from her. When he is leaving he goes to this place and gets his hat and coat and puts them on, without any assistance from her.

The point is that a man does not want a woman to help him in putting on his coat, and a well-bred man would be embarrassed—or should be—if he were given this assistance. In every case the woman should let a man take care of his own wraps. Don't hold his coat for him, at any rate, and don't hold his hat when you are in a theatre!

I am very glad that you asked this question, dear friend, for, as a matter of fact, there are many many women who think that it is a part of their hostess-ship to take a man's wraps when he enters their homes. But the man will be much more grateful if you leave his wraps to his own care, and just tell him the convenient place to put them

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Kindly advise me the proper place for knife and fork before a meal is finished? E. G.

A GOOD question, this, and one that I take great pleasure in answering, for we can be "known" by the way we place our knives and forks while we are eating.

May I begin with a suggestion as to where the knife and fork should NOT be? After a knife and fork have been used for a course, they should not again be placed with their handles on the table-cloth. That is, the entire knife and fork should rest on the plate.

It is always correct during the course to place the knife so that the handle of the knife rests, say two or three inches in from the rim.

If you eat in the European manner that is, do not "shift" your fork from your left hand to your right after you have cut off a mouthful of meat you lay down your knife and fork after every mouthful or two—to regulate ease, grace and interest in the conversation, in a convenient place on the plate, the knife always on the right and the fork always on the left. How we lay them depends on the amount of food and the position of the food on the plate. That is sometimes it is easy to cross them somewhat, sometimes to place them to the right, and sometimes to the left of the food. The one valiant place is the place to lay them, always remembering that their handles must not touch the table or the tablecloth.

If you eat in the non-European manner that is, do not "shift" your fork from your left hand to your right after you have cut off a mouthful of meat you lay down your knife and fork after every mouthful or two—to regulate ease, grace and interest in the conversation, in a convenient place on the plate, the knife always on the right and the fork always on the left. How we lay them depends on the amount of food and the position of the food on the plate. That is sometimes it is easy to cross them somewhat, sometimes to place them to the right, and sometimes to the left of the food. The one valiant place is the place to lay them, always remembering that their handles must not touch the table or the tablecloth.

If you eat in the non-European manner, after you have cut a piece of meat you lay your knife across the rim of the plate and "shift" the fork to the right hand. To my mind, this method of eating is awkward and uninteresting, but it is not incorrect. The European method of eating is making rapid strides in this country now, and every one should, I think, be interested in it even if he or she then chooses not to accept it!

Mother Child's Health Guardian

By Chas. A. L. Reed, M. D.

Former President of the American Medical Association

A HIGH standard of public health means a high standard of health in each family and the first guardian of a family's health is the mother.

Perhaps that is why the health of children has improved so much more than that of mothers. "Mother" thinks of herself last — and not only at meal times.

Public health laws demand that persons suffering from certain infectious diseases shall be taken to a hospital.

To carry out the law, without upsetting the patient, the co-operation of the house-wife is essential.

No one likes to be separated from his own people when he is ill but there are two considerations which must be considered. First, his best chance of recovery, and second, the best chance of avoiding the illness.

The disease in which these factors loom the largest is consumption. The more ill the patient the greater danger to others. Even when there seems to be no chance of recovery, it is essential to keep the children away from the patient.

In London, since 1923, it is possible for the County Council to send healthy children to the country or seaside if any member of the family at home is very ill with consumption or to remove the patient to a hospital on a magistrate's order. Compulsory removal would, however, never be necessary if all housewives were convinced of the real danger their children are in if both they and the patient remain at home.

Mothers can do much in seeing that there are sufficient welfare centres and health visitors in their districts to enable them to get the necessary advice and help for their babies as often as may be necessary.

Mothers can help the school doctor and school nurse by believing that their advice is given entirely for the good of the child and is applying with the help of the nurse, the right treatment.

Mothers can co-operate in the measures which require the fitness of food by dealing with people who supply fresh and clean food and milk. Having purchased the food, a good housewife knows how to guard it against dirt, heat and flies and how to plan out meals best suited to the needs of each member of the family.

Mothers can further co-operate by taking advice on these questions of the health visitor or school nurse.

Co-operation, where these things are concerned, lies in getting health laws enforced and improved and in making the best use of their drains and dust bins (ash cans), not mentioned in my article of yesterday.

Balto Wins Reward

By WINIFRED BLACK.

BALTO is out of the dime museums. Hurrah!

Balto was the leader of the dog team which carried antitoxin to Nome, Alaska two or three Winters ago, when nearly every child in the settlement was down with diphtheria.

There was no serum in Nome and the children died like flies.

The dog sled was packed, a man was found to drive it, the antitoxin was tucked under the blanket—and away they went.

Mile after mile they struggled on and finally the fourth or fifth day out they trotted into Nome, carrying life and hope to the hundred houses there.

They rested awhile and then they trekked back over the snow again and somebody bought them and put them into the cheap museums or exhibition.

They hated the museums and they hated the crowds of staring people.

Never cross, never snappish, just tired and a little sick of everything.

Well, the other day there was another story in the paper about Balto and his friends.

Somebody went into the museum and saw these—some one who loved dogs—and he bought Balto and all the other dogs with him and has taken them to his big ranch. He's going to let them run free all the rest of their lives.

I like that man—don't you?

Home Hints

Buttermilk is excellent for the skin, and will help to prevent freckles. Try a milk substitute by washing the face each morning with a cupful of a pint of milk to a pint of warm water; then after thoroughly drying it, dab the face with a lotion made with half a pint of double distilled rose water with the same quantity of elderflower water. Put these in a basin, and add drop by drop one ounce of tincture of benzoin, stirring it well constantly while doing this. Then bottle and cork. Dab a little on the skin, and proceed, allowing it to dry on, afterwards giving a slight powdering with any good powder.

When the whole of a cucumber is not used at a meal, it will keep fresh best if it is stood with the stalk resting in a jug of water. It will last days in this fashion using some way a cut marrow will survive keeping for a day or so if the cut surface is placed on a dish.

To The Woman Who Appreciates The Modern Method Of Cooking

IN every home where you find Mazola you can be certain of one thing—it is a home governed by a housewife who understands and appreciates the modern method of cooking.

She knows that Mazola is a pure Vegetable Oil—as good and delicious as the corn from which it

That for frying, Mazola gives her greaseless, easily digestive foods—

For Shortening, Mazola is equal to butter in richness—she uses less and it costs less—

And for Salads, she now prefers Mazola to the more expensive imported oils for its uniformity in quality and mildness in flavor.

Your grocer sells Mazola in pint, quart, half-gallon and gallon tins. The larger sizes are, of course, more economical.

3 teaspoon soda
3 teaspoons salt
1 teaspoon Stickney & Poor's Cinnamon
½ teaspoon Stickney & Poor's Cloves
Flesh of Mary & Poor's Mace
¾ cup cut walnut meats
½ cup currants
½ cup cut raisins

Cream shortening, add sugar and eggs, beat well. Mix flour with soda, salt and spices; add to first mixture work in nuts, etc. and fruits. Roll a small amount at a time on floured board, cut with a small sharp cutter. Bake on oiled tin at 350 degrees F.

Breakfasts That "Stand By" You

Quaker Oats Supplies Vigor to Speed up Your Mornings

NOURISHING breakfasts of well-balanced food are now being widely urged by authorities as an important aid to business success of adults, and physical and mental development of school children.

Some 70% of the day's important work in the business world, it is now known, falls into the four morning hours. 80% of the best improving school work, in thousands of schools and colleges recently investigated, including Princeton, Harvard, most state universities and public schools, falls in the same period.

To be right mornings, you must eat right food; meaning rightly balanced, complete food.

Thus Quaker Oats — excellently balanced in protein, carbohydrates, minerals, vitamine "B" — and the bulk that makes laxatives seldom needed — is the world's dietetic urge. Savory, delicious food that "stands by" you through the morning. No other cereal compares. Always remember that.

Get Quick Quaker—which cooks in 2½ to 5 minutes — or regular Quaker Oats today at your grocer.

"An Ace," Says Their Mother

"It's pure, likeable, creamy flavor and tasty brown crust, have a lasting appeal to my children," writes Mrs. Edward F. McMorrow of Dorchester.

"They love it and demand it always, because it is so different. It has proven to be the Ace of Breads to me."

Mrs. McMorrow's children, Edward and Dorothy, appear above.

Just 8 years ago, 6405 Boston housewives brought samples of their home-baked bread in Tremont Temple to show us the kind of bread they wanted for themselves and their children. Being frankly copied from the best of these 6405 loaves, Bond Bread quickly became Boston's most popular bread.

Why is it that after 8 years of unparalleled popularity, Bond Bread now enjoys an even greater demand than ever before in its history?

Because day after day for 8 long years, Bond Bread has been uniformly home-like. Its splendid flavor comes from its pure ingredients—ingredients every bit as pure and choice as you yourself would use. Its healthfulness comes largely from its thorough baking. This thorough baking is what makes it so firm and close-textured, as well as so flavorful.

Every day more and more housewives realize it pays to discriminate in bread. They have tried them all and have convinced themselves that a home-like, healthful bread, like Bond, is the greatest bargain a woman can buy.

Chapter LIV.

There was no warmth, no friendliness in Gus MacCloud's blue eyes as he looked at Bobbie. He might have been a total stranger, standing there before her.

"I came over to talk over a part in a new picture I'm going to start next week," he said gravely. And there was neither warmth nor friendliness in his voice.

"It's just a clothes-horse part," he went on, as if he didn't see the starry look of happiness that had flashed into Bobbie's face. "And I'm offering it to you, not as a friend or an enemy, but simply as a director who wants a pretty girl for his picture."

"I see." It seemed to Bobbie that she answered him without stopping to think what she was saying. It was as if the words said themselves. "And, as a girl who wants to get on in the movies, I'll be glad to take the part, Mr. MacCloud. As you once told me, I'm a bum actress—but I guess I know how to wear clothes!"

A dull red flush swept over his face with its narrowed eyes, thin lips, and little blond toothbrush mustache.

"I didn't tell you you were a bum actress," he said solemnly. "What I did tell you was that you needed training—that you were too stiff."

"I remember exactly what you said!" Bitterness crept into Bobbie's voice as she answered him. She would never forget what he had said to her that day in Roy Schultz's office, three months ago.

"Well, may I expect to see you Monday morning at Magnificat?" he asked woodenly, and she nodded.

Then she sold him four books and he went out carrying them under his arm. From the shadowy depths of the quaint little shop she watched him get into his car and drive away.

But she was marvelously happy over the part he had offered her. What did she care if it was a "clothes-horse" part or not? The great thing was that at last she was going to have a real part in a real picture—and with no strings tied to it!

"I shouldn't have jumped at it the way I did," she thought. "I should have asked what the salary was, too."

But no matter how small it was, it would be more than $21 a week in the book store.

"I'm leaving, here on Saturday," she told Miss Bittie Miss Gray that night at closing time. "I'm going back into pictures." She spoke as if she had been in pictures for years instead of only a few days all told.

On Saturday night the little book store stayed open until 9 o'clock. And it was along about 8.30 when a woman with a little girl came in, and walked up the stairs to the balcony where the children's books were kept.

Something about her seemed familiar to Bobbie, who got a back view of her as she went up, with the child clinging to her hand.

Then she heard her voice as she spoke to Miss Gray. It was Lotte Schultz's voice.

Bobbie ran up the short flight of stairs to her.

"Why, Lotte, when did you get back?" she asked as she caught her by the shoulders and kissed her on both cheeks.

Bobbie Prepares to Quit Job in Book Store

"Today," Lotte answered. "I've asked Roy to move out of the Beverly Hills house so that Jolly and I can go back into it. Jolly missed her home and her little playhouse—and it was so cold back East. Jolly, aren't you going to kiss Miss Ransom? You remember nice Miss Ransom, who used to teach you your letters."

But Jolly shook her head. "I don't remember her," she fibbed. "And I don't want to kiss her."

Bobbie watched her thoughtfully as she turned away when Lotte interrupted her:

"Bobbie, what ARE you doing here? Clerking in this store?" she asked, wide-eyed with surprise.

Bobbie shook her head.

"No. I was working here, but I'm leaving tonight. Gus MacCloud's given me a part in a new picture of his, and I'm going to start work on Monday."

"How are things going with you and Gus?"

"They're at a standstill," Bobbie laughed. "I've barely seen him since you went away, Lotte. I haven't seen anybody. I've just sold books and marked time."

The Magnifica lot was not the place of wonder and enchantment to Bobbie on Monday morning that it once had been. It was, she told herself, "old stuff."

The first person she saw was Monica. Her eyes opened when she saw Bobbie.

"Well, what are YOU doing on this lot?" she asked with a kind of gasp. "I thought you'd given up movies for that book store!"

Bobbie grinned at her. She was enjoying this moment with all her soul.

"So I had, Monica," she drawled. "But Gus teased me to come back. He wants me for his new picture."

"Well, isn't that just lovely, Honeybunch?" Monica said. But she didn't look as if she thought it was just lovely, as she flounced away.

Bobbie went into the administration building and up the stairs to Gus MacCloud's office.

The door of it stood open. Within Gus sat at his desk, and facing him was Dan Lancy Cord, whom Bobbie knew had been in Magnifica movies for years. Lounging against the wall was Reece Butler, with his hands in his pockets, as Joan Joyce's leading man, Reece Butler.

The two actors were made up, their faces covered with pinkish yellow grease-paint, their eyes outlined with blue. Their hair was plastered down on their heads, and their clothes were too perfect.

All at once it struck Bobbie that all three of the men were lacking in something that all men should have. She didn't know what it was, that they didn't have—sincerity, perhaps, or just sheer masculine ruggedness and strength.

But whatever it was that was missing from them, she knew it was something that Andy Jerrold had. Why he popped into her mind at she looked at them, she didn't know.

But she did—and she said to herself that he never would wear a diamond ring on the little finger of his left hand where Gus wore one. Nor would he ever pick back his hair like that, or be so careful with his clothes.

Bobbie Finds Her Name Lettered on the Door

"I guess I like the rough and ready kind of men best," she thought. "I don't like them with little finger rings and plastered hair and cigarette-holders. I must be a low-brow or a cave-woman."

She stepped over the threshold of MacCloud's office. He looked up and frowned.

"I can't see you now, Miss Ransom. I'm busy!" he said shortly Bitter hunt up your dressing-room I've had one assigned to you."

(dressing room! The heat Bobbie had hoped for was a room shared with two or three other girls!

But the coldness in Gus' voice took away all of Bobbie's gratitude toward him for giving her a dressing-room. It was like a cup of ice water dashed into her face.

She went down across the lot to the building where the featured players' rooms were. On the door of one of them was her name: "Miss Ransom." The paint was still wet.

"Miss Ransom." It was like a dream come true to see it painted there on the door of her dressing-room. It was almost as good as seeing it in electric lights above a theater!

She opened the door and went in. The room was small and white. There was only a table, a chair, and a cretonne-covered couch in it but it seemed like a home and earthly Paradise to Bobbie—that it was a room.

Gus was just as cold and distant as the days that followed as he had been on that first day.

He never called Bobbie anything but "Miss Ransom," and he fairly yelled at her through the megaphone when she was on the set.

The picture was called "Luxury," and Bobbie's part in it was the part of a chorus-girl vamp. She had six perfectly wonderful dresses to wear and Reece Butler told her that she "had it all over Joan Joyce," who was starring in it.

Perhaps Bobbie never would have done any good acting in "Luxury" if she had been on good terms with Gus MacCloud. But he was so sharp and rude to her, she was angry. And when a woman's blood is up, there is practically nothing that she cannot do!

And so Bobbie acted. Instead of walking through her part. She acted with dash and spirit. And, as Mimi, the chorus girl siren, she smoked cigarettes and made eyes as if she had been smoking and flirting for years.

She waited for Gus to give her some word of praise, but he never spoke to her except when she was NOBODY home—the two whom everybody thought were left behind in the very unassuming little "flat," when those everybodies went to the Movies, are not THERE. They are knee-deep in Paradise, the Isle of Eros that lies in a purple sea.

John and Marie are going to be married—very soon—they hope. Just as soon as John makes a little [illegible]. Just as soon as Marie can see that the family can cheerfully snap their fingers at her little bit that brings. Just as soon as "Alf's" gone out of Columbia and can hang out his shingle and get a puzzled client or two. happen so soon. I was afraid it might never happen. What I can't understand is . . . why you let me.

"I couldn't help it," Jacqueline said. Now, for the first time, she felt her face coloring. "You had better sit down and have some breakfast."

"You're sorry——"

"Yes." Her voice was subdued "I didn't realize . . . but I knew it was going to happen."

He came to her swiftly and recaptured her in his arms. But this embrace was without the instinctive destruction of strength in abandonment. Had she desired she could have freed herself but she did not.

"I love you, Jacqueline," he told her seriously. "Do you realize that on the set—and then he either growled or roared.

"I wonder what he'd do if I'd walk straight up to him one of these days and kiss him." Bobbie thought wickedly, as she watched him. And often, as she lay in bed at night after a hard day, she wondered if she weren't living in love with him all over again. There was something so thrilling about the way he cracked his whip on the set, giving orders, commanding that this be done and that be done. 'And make it snappy!' was his watchword. He ended almost every sentence of his that way.

"You sure are showing more pep than I thought you had in you, Bobbie!" a deep voice said to her one day as she came off the set.

She was still dazzled by the glare of the Kliegs lights, but after a minute she saw that it was Roy Schultz who stood beside her in the dimness. He looked older than usual—and tired. She wondered if he worried about Lotte.

"Yes, I heard that you said I was a perfect stick, Roy," she told him with entire frankness, and they laughed. For she was anything but a stick as Mimi, the cigarette-smoking, kiss-bestowing chorus girl of "Luxury."

Three days later Roy Schultz sent for her late in the afternoon.

fact—I love you"

"I'm sorry." Her voice was muffled regret.

"I'm a bit frightened—it's such an overpowering thing, dear," he told her. "You're not sorry, though—you're frightened."

"I hadn't counted on—this," she said, her face still averted. "I'm sorry it happened, because now I know I can't forget it. Whatever I do it will be with me all my life."

"We'll be together all our lives, Tom Ware declared. "Do you remember that day together in the roadhouse up on the Worcester road? It was all I could do all the time we were together to keep from asking you to marry me. But I was afraid I might have spoiled it all by being in too much of a rush."

The fact of marriage kept escaping Jacqueline. In the present tidal wave of pleasant joy—was withering her comprehension, but she could not mentally see beyond it. Marriage with a state she had never contemplated except in the light of a legal [illegible] but, she admitted secretly, she had never been in love before.

"I don't know about getting married, Tom," she said doubtfully. "The idea's too new to me . . . and I'm afraid of it. But I wanted to go on with my [illegible] career. I don't want to spend that before I have a chance to see what I can really do."

They came out of the clouds: down to solid earth. Their embrace relaxed, but their hands tightened together.

"Is that why you said you were sorry?"

"Yes . . ."

His hair Jacqueline noticed, was rumpled, a scowl between the eyes marred the familiar pleasant expression of his face. A wave of pity for him an increasing swell of affection, throbbed in her heart.

"I don't mean that I don't want to marry you ever," she told him tenderly. "It's just that I haven't had my chance with life yet. Give me my chance, Tom . . . let me see what I can do with my singing. I've lived and dreamed in the hope of accomplishing something really worth while—and I don't want it swamped."

But the trouble with that proposition, he returned, was that she probably would succeed. This is all bunk about careers for women," insisted. Wouldn't know a successful woman today who wouldn't have rather if she made a real marriage founded on love."

Jacqueline's eyes grew unhappy. "I said I was sorry," she repeated miserably.

Tom Ware shook his head and smiled.

"The trouble with us, dear," remarked, "is that we're acting like a pair of fools. We're wasting these precious minutes arguing when we ought to be—"

He took her in his arms and again their lips met with abandoned sweetness

RED CABBAGE PICKLE.

For this you require one firm red cabbage, one ounce of whole peppers, one ounce of bruised ginger, vinegar. Remove the outer leaves of the cabbage and clean it well. Then shred as finely as possible, cutting across the leaves. Spread on dishes and cover lightly with fine salt. Leave until following day. Then drain very thoroughly. Fill some jars with the cabbage and distribute the spices among them. Cover well with vinegar that has been boiled and then cooled. Cover tightly when cold.

DAILY SHORT STORY

MONA LISA

By Louise P. Armstrong

OLD Donald McCray had come to the village of Sandston to die. He had no sentiment for the place; it had been suggested to him [illegible] (who may have [illegible]) McCray had passed his [illegible] there. McCray would have preferred to go to Paris.

It had been years since he had visited that old city, in company with Ann, his wife, on a sort of celebration of their new [illegible]. He had been astonished [illegible]. For there, [illegible] early [illegible], and it [illegible] business affairs [illegible] contribute [illegible] the world.

[illegible] visiting old buildings, [illegible] Latin Quarter, [illegible] youth in tatters and [illegible] with dreams of glory in their eyes. The gay crowds of the boulevards pleased him, the Place de la Concorde intrigued him—and there was the Louvre with its treasures, the best to him being the matchless Mona Lisa.

He had not been able to explain his admiration of this immortal canvas. The figure was certainly in no way like Ann, his wife, for Ann was pink and plump and always exceedingly gay. But something in the strange painted eyes haunted him—some unfathomable secret baffled and awed him. He realized now, after years of remembering her, that it was Mona Lisa who sought to charm him back to Paris again, that he might seek in his age to read the secret of those eyes—a secret that had given [illegible] to so much controversy.

But the doctor had forbidden a sea voyage. Weakly acquiescent, Donald McCray had agreed to come to Sandston. He had put up at the little inn with his servant Wilkins, to wait upon him, and a few books and the old easy chair he had grown accustomed to at home. It was a quiet place, and comfortable. A great window in his bedroom overlooked the public square, and from the height he could see the green meadows beyond the streets. Cattle grazed there peacefully; people moved about the main thoroughfare with a languor which to him was maddening. Then he noted one morning a young man walking very briskly down the street at an early hour.

What could he be in such hurry about? McCray questioned the innkeeper and learned that the lad [illegible] Jed Thomas' son, Henry, just back from college and now serving as assistant cashier of the First National Bank. It was his duty to be on hand early at the bank to open the building, sweep the floors and set things in order. McCray smiled. Queer business for a bank official! Nevertheless, he admired this energetic youngster. College certainly had not imbued him with any false notions of pride.

When the old gentleman ventured down to luncheon in the dining-room of the inn several days later, he was pleased to see young Thomas enter, and at first opportunity Mr McCray engaged him in conversation.

"I hear you're employed at the bank," he remarked genially.

"Employed is right," replied the young man brightly. "I just about run the place. Evans, the cashier, has an insurance business that takes nearly all his time. I'm new at the work, but it hasn't stumped me yet even when I had to make out a financial statement for the Comptroller of Currency in Washington. Evans was away for a week when the demand came!" he grinned in reminiscence.

"How did you manage?" McCray questioned curiously.

"Oh, I had a book on 'Practical Banking Methods' and I dug about in the files. Uncle Sam sure taught me a lot that day."

McCray laughed heartily, and young Thomas joined him. But the next instant he stopped and hung his head, flushing painfully. Into the inn a young girl had walked, carrying on her arm a huge basket of roses.

She was tall and slender and her glossy hair, parted severely in the centre, was brushed in a low coil on her shapely neck. Upon the oval of her face was a half smile, which set her clear-cut features in a mask.

"Know her?" muttered young Thomas as the old man stifled an exclamation.

"Mona Lisa!" breathed Donald McCray.

"No, Mister, you're mistaken," corrected the youth. "That's Phyllis Osgood. Doesn't speak to me, did you notice? Want to know why? Because my father was a butcher, and her folks are born snobs!" There was such deep feeling in his voice that McCray's sympathy sped to him.

"I guess I wouldn't mind—with anyone else," Thomas continued. "Phyllis and I went to school together, and we were pals then. I worked my way through college and she went off to a swell school in the North. Come back with ideas. Phyllis' folks are big frogs here. Her father owns half the town. Well, she gave a party when she got back and she didn't invite me. Hasn't noticed me any more than she would the doormat. This morning she passed without a nod as I was sweeping off the sidewalk in front of the bank!"

He got up quickly after this outburst and slunk off, and it seemed that the girl had been waiting for him to go, for she now approached McCray and smiled.

"I came to bring you these roses from our garden, Mr. McCray," she said. "Father has heard much of you—well, I'm afraid you don't know me—"

"Oh, but I do!" the old man assured her gravely. "I saw your wonderful face years ago! Sit down, my dear, and humor an old man's whim. I'll tell you about it!"

"Long before my wife died, we went to Paris, and I saw you there in a magnificent building, your lovely hands folded in your lap, a ghost of a smile on your sweet face, and the searching eyes of you."

"Oh, Mona Lisa!" exclaimed Phyllis Osgood. "Am I, indeed, like her?"

"Like she must have been before Leonardo discovered and loved her," said old Donald McCray. "But she is wiser than you, having known sorrow and learned much of life. And you, who are so like her must have a little of her wisdom. I wonder that you cannot see true worth when it is before your eyes—know that brass often glitters seductively, while gold may be hidden for a time beneath a bushel! Tell your father I'll be delighted to meet him," he added. "And thanks for the posies. It pleases the old to be remembered."

"How strangely you talk," said Phyllis Osgood as she turned to go.

He could not pry into young Thomas' affairs, and yet he was eager to know the boy's state of mind. Days passed, however, and still the assistant cashier who practically ran the First National Bank looked gloomy. Old McCray felt drawn to the lad. "I'll do something fine for him," he told himself. "But Mona must know that she loves him for himself! I would not like to think she has a mind only for material things."

On Saturday he had slept late and descended to find the dining-room in an uproar. Bandits had broken into the bank and looted the safe. As they were getting away in a high-powered car the assistant cashier, who had just appeared upon the scene, sprang to the running board and tried to snatch the wheel and stop them. A shot was fired and a moment later the lad lay in the dusty street, a bullet through the flesh of his arm. They carried him into the inn and bandaged his wound. At the sight of frightened faces about him he quickly recovered his equanimity.

"It's all right," he said cheerily. "There was not much money in the old safe, only about $2,000, and they're not likely to get far. I'm expecting a shipment of currency today. Thought I ought to stop them if I could," he added.

"Good boy," cried old McCray. "I admire your pluck. And I want you to know, Thomas, that I've arranged to give you a real chance. I have just received a letter from a New York banker who will make you a very nice offer. Come up to my room and we'll talk it over."

Thomas arose and grasped his hand. "That's handsome of you, sir, and I'll be glad to—later. Now I have to go over and open the bank. Must get someone else to sweep this morning," he added ruefully with a glance at his bandaged [illegible].

"I've already done it, Henry!" They turned to the doorway and beheld Phyllis Osgood, flushed charmingly, an old stump of a broom in her hand.

"You did that for me, Phyllis?" Thomas exclaimed. "Swept the floor——"

"And the sidewalk," she added triumphantly. "Why shouldn't I? Am I so narrowminded and foolish? No, for I believe I can see real worth, and even gold beneath a bushel!" And linking her arm through the young man's she passed out into the street, with a quiet, enigmatic smile at old Donald McCray.

MEDBURY SAYS---

By JOHN P. MEDBURY

HORTICULTURAL statistics show that there are over ten thousand wall flowers in this country. Wall flowers are timid young ladies who blossom at dances and are very seldom picked.

THEY may be beautiful but they're dumb from the ankles down.

ONE fellow says he could stand at the other end of the hall and listen to his girl's arches falling.

HE took her to a dance one night and she spent the whole evening on his feet.

SHE ruined so many shoes that even W. L. Douglas couldn't afford to keep company with her.

AFTER the first dance, one foot was asleep and the other one was unconscious.

THE next time he took her out he poured cocaine in his socks.

SHE was an expert, she could find his bunions in the dark.

SHE'D be a strict prohibitionist if she could only keep away from the corn.

SHE was a student of ornithology and her favorite bird was a Blue-Jay.

HER sweetheart never touched a drop of liquor but his feet were always plastered.

HER motto is "Never let the left foot know what the right one is doing."

AS long as she's been dancing, she can't keep in step. If one foot is on time the other one is using daylight saving.

SHE'S always three or four feet behind the orchestra.

SHE has no ear for rhythm. The music goes in one foot and out the others.

OF all the wall flowers in this country, only ten per cent. of them will make good dancers. The rest of them should be put back in the greenhouse.

THE MEDITATIONS OF A WIFE---BY HELEN ROWLAND

WHEN Rebecca West says that there is a sad lack of attractive men in the world, she not only deals a solar plexus blow to the self-complacent sex, but, incidentally, gives her own sex away.

Of course, men are not as attractive as women. They don't have to be!

It is true that the average girl goes about with a lot of men who bore her to tears, just for the sake of having something in bell-bottom trousers sitting opposite her in a restaurant; and that she sometimes marries one of them just for the sake of having something besides an empty chair across the breakfast table and something besides the clock to make a noise around the house.

• • •

It is perfectly true that when a woman gives a dinner party she can think of a dozen beautiful and attractive women to invite, and of only one or two men who could possibly stir the feminine pulse and heart.

• • •

It is perfectly true that every hostess has to "fill in," with blobs and flat-tires and makeshifts.

• • •

But, why give the SECRET away? Why spoil the game?

Soap to Cleanse Ointment to Heal

Try our new Shaving Stick.

As long as women can go on persuading men that it is their fatal fascination that makes the weaker sex pursue them, they will be pliable and yielding and easily broken to harness.

There may be other roads to a man's heart, but through his vanity is the quickest and surest and shortest cut.

• • •

Every woman wants to marry more than any man THINKS he wants to marry.

Every woman wants a home and children more than any man THINKS he wants these things.

• • •

As long as marriage looks like one long, sweet vacation to a woman, and like a life-sentence to hard labor to a man, women will be more anxious to marry than men are.

• • •

As long as a woman must have some sort of romance or other to make her life endurable, some sort of devotion, somebody to sit beside her at the theatre, somebody to adorn the head of her dinner table, and somebody to dance with her, she will go right on lollying men into fancying that they are irresistible.

• • •

As long as woman needs man more than he thinks he needs her, she will go right on flattering dubs and dumb-bells and bores and antiques into imagining themselves glorified charmers.

• • •

It is through man's beautiful, naive vanity, that woman gets everything she wants in life, from love to a limousine, from a job to a wedding-ring, and from an escort to a life-partner.

• • •

Taking away a man's vanity is like taking the saxophone out of jazz, or the wag out of a dog's tail. It robs him of his most appealing characteristic, and leaves him so flat and limp!

• • •

The Lord put VANITY into the male of the species so that the female of the species might conquer, soften and civilize him! It is his one vulnerable spot. Don't spoil the game!

Should We Avoid Foreign Goods? The Facts Answer

By B. C. FORBES

NEW YORK, April 26.—Should patriotic Americans avoid buying foreign goods? Instantly you are inclined to reply "Yes." But let's see.

• • •

AN IRON and steel concern is enclosing in its letters a label reading:

"We do not have in our stockyards, and do not propose having, a single foreign rolled steel section.

"We don't use them.

"We don't base our quotations on using them.

"Three principal reasons out of the many that influence us in this course are:

"1. We are patriotic and anything American means a lot to us.

B. C. Forbes

"2. We have built our business on quick, efficient service, made possible by our proximity to our sources of supply.

"3. Foreign steel shapes compared to those rolled in this country are pretty punk, anyway.

"Remember the first cost does not always mean much in the last analysis."

THAT SOUNDS most patriotic, doesn't it?

F. H. Farwell of the Lutcher & Moore Lumber Company, Texas, who received one of these labels, writes me:

"We are wondering if patriotism debars a man or concern from buying anything in or from foreign countries. If that is true, what would become of our own foreign trade? Where would we get the markets, and just how would we approach the subject in order to make a sale of American goods abroad?

"Several years ago a manufacturer in an address made this remarkable statement: 'Twenty-five per cent. of every manufactured article in this country should be exported,' and he proved conclusively that it was good business for the individual business and for the group as a whole

"We have thought a lot over that statement, and concluded from our experience he was right.

"Isn't the attitude expressed in the label narrow-minded?" It is. What is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander. What would befall industry, business, agriculture, securities and employment in this country if every foreign nation boycotted American products? Our castle of prosperity would collapse.

CONSIDER these facts:

In the last ten years foreign countries have bought from us over $55,000,000,000 worth of products of one kind or another. Doubtless, more than half of this entire sum has gone directly into American pay envelopes for work done to produce the things exported. Since the beginning of 1925 we have exported no less than $11,000,000,000 worth of products.

• • •

AS A MATTER of fact, other countries buy from us more than we buy from them. In the last ten years our balance of foreign sales over foreign purchases has totalled no less than $18,000,000,000.

THEN, how could foreign countries ever hope to pay off their war debts to us, and the huge sums they have since borrowed, if all Americans were to refuse to purchase or handle any foreign products?

In the last five years the United States has floated and absorbed a grand total of $4,000,000,000 foreign loans. Were we to boycott foreign goods, probably even the interest on our foreign loans could not be met.

Also, how could we load our American ships?

• • •

THE GOLDEN rule is now widely lauded as a good rule in business, as a good rule in handling labor relations, as a good rule in all the affairs of life. Why is it not an equally good rule in this matter of international trade?

The answer is that it is.

RADIO DIALOG

by C. WILLIAM RADOS

TO anyone who had a set to sell, last night was an excellent night on the radio. If the prospective customer was one who had to be convinced about radio, then there was first the President's great speech.

Then if the customer was one who knew radio and wanted the thrill of distance, it was there.

For our list included WADC, Akron, Ohio; WCMA, Culver, Indiana; WGCP, Newark, N. J.; WWRL, Woodside, N. Y.; WGY, WJZ, WEAF, WABC, WMCA, New York; WBAL, Baltimore; KDKA, Pittsburgh; WJAR, Providence; WAAM, Newark; and WCPH, New York. For those with more time a list three times as long was easily available.

Static was off the air, while signals from far and near roamed in. A new one with us was WMCA, Culver, Indiana, broadcasting that they had given a small navy for the Mississippi relief work.

"Federal Radio Commission punishes 'ir pirates' by assigning waves below 220 metres." So reads the news and we read on to discover that since the Radio Commission has been hired for one year they have to keep busy. Each man gets $10,000 for the year's work. If they can get the whole system complicated maybe they won't be finished by the end of the year and will have jobs next year also.

When we were small we learned that if we were bad we would go below. Bad stations now go below also.

If we stole jam we ran the risk of ultimate eternal punishment. For those station which "jammed" the Radio Commission has reserved a place where static crackles and where stations perish shortly after vain attempts to be heard. There is justice.

EDITORIAL PAGE OF THE ☆ ☆ BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN ☆ ☆ BOSTON APRIL 26, 1927

THE BOSTON AMERICAN'S PLATFORM FOR BOSTON AND NEW ENGLAND

For BOSTON:
1—Clean streets.
2—Solution of traffic and parking problems.
3—Better pay for honest public service.
4—An airport SECOND TO NONE.
5—Erection of a MUNICIPAL AUDITORIUM to compare with any in the land; in order that Boston, properly supplied with first-class hotels, may be the premier convention city of the U. S. A.

For NEW ENGLAND:
1—Weld the six States into a unit through the activities of the New England Council, thus creating a community consciousness.
2—Promote intercourse with Central and South America, encouraging New Englanders to "turn to the sea" again.
3—Keeping everlastingly at the job of telling the rest of the country all about our unique advantages as Summer and Winter Playground of the Nation.
4—Foster the prosperity of our industries through (1) greater efficiency in production and (2) the use of modern methods in merchandising.
5—Promote in every way such natural resources as forests, water powers and fisheries.
6—Assist New England agriculture to better marketing methods.

The President's Speech

Coolidge Echoed What the American People Feel Regarding China; He Has a Chance to Give That Land a Square Deal

China was the fitting climax of President Coolidge's speech last night. China is what the people of the country have been waiting to hear about.

The President echoed what the people feel—a real sympathy with the Chinese people in their struggle towards "freedom, unity, the cultivation of a national spirit, and the realization of a republican form of government."

That is wise. It was fifty years before our people forgave the European nations who sought to take advantage of our dissension and distress during our own Civil War.

The people of the United States will rejoice that the President does not intend to let our military forces join European powers in punitive measures against the Chinese people. Some of these powers threaten bombardment or blockade because Eugene Chen of the Hankow government has not given a wholly satisfactory answer to the "identic note" sent him on the Nanking incident.

We joined in the "identic note," but we are not to join in the European form of follow-up. The President merely says that Chen's "reply, though conciliatory in tone and to a certain degree responsive, leaves the final disposition of the issue a matter for further consideration by our government."

We are also ready "to negotiate a treaty giving China complete tariff autonomy, and to negotiate a release of territorial rights as soon as China is prepared to give protection to American people and their property."

That, too, is the only fair thing. At the present time we join the European powers in limiting China to a 5 per cent. customs duty. Customs duties are and must long remain the chief source of Chinese revenue.

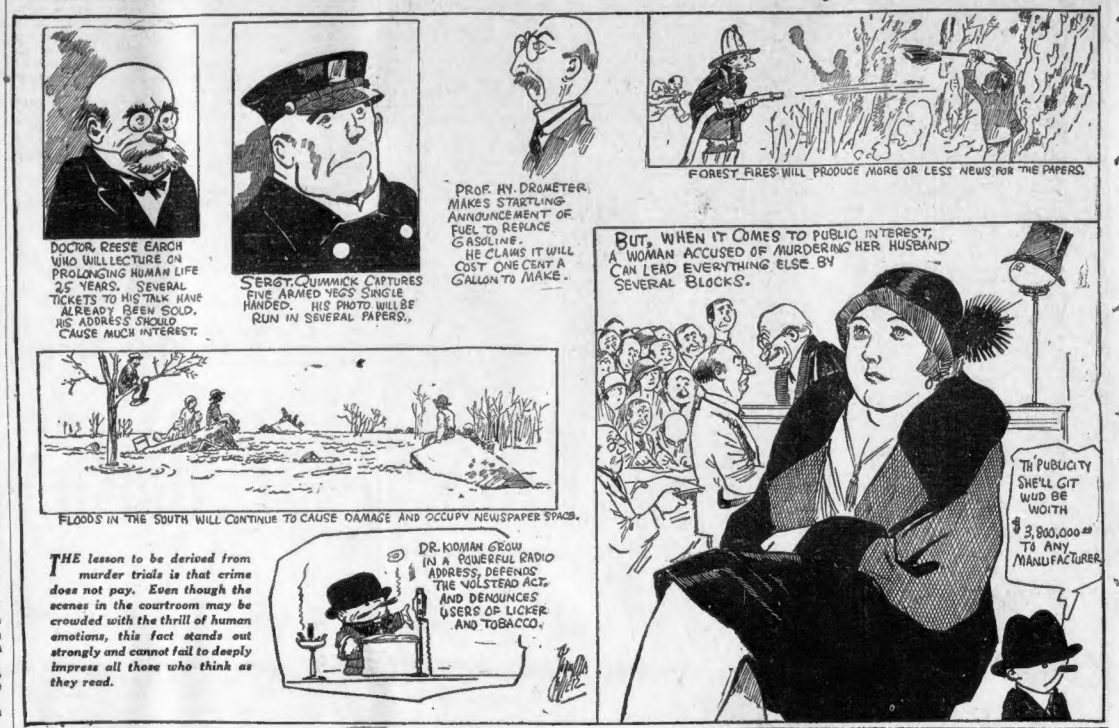
Five per cent. gives too little revenue to support a central government strong enough to suppress the war lords and to support adequate courts of justice. Then we proceed to enforce "extra-territorial rights," meaning the right of our citizens to be tried in American courts maintained on Chinese soil.

John Hay established the principle of the "open door" in China. It really meant simply that no nation should have a monopoly in exploiting China, but jealousy of the exploiters has worked to China's advantage. She loves us for the open door, which saved her from Japan.

President Coolidge has the opportunity to give China something more than the open door, and that is the square deal.

Such a policy in Washington would be as popular in America as in China.

What Price Murder Trials? -:- -:- By Franklin Collier



THE lesson to be derived from murder trials is that crime does not pay. Even though the scenes in the courtroom may be crowded with the thrill of human emotions, this fact stands out strongly and cannot fail to deeply impress all those who think as they read.

HOW to Own Your Home

ONE of the Things Which Will Be Made Plain Next Week to Every Inquirer

In directing the attention of its readers to Better Homes Week, and in particular to the BOSTON exhibition in Huntington Hall, at No. 491 Boylston Street, the Boston Evening American has no axe to grind, no other purpose than the greatest good of the community.

Beginning on Monday, next, the Better Homes EXHIBITION will be open daily from 10 a. m. to 10 p. m.

Admission will be FREE.

The head of this Better Homes in America movement is Mr. Herbert Hoover, Secretary of Commerce in President Coolidge's Cabinet.

And what are its purposes?

Among others, these:

1—To make accessible to ALL citizens knowledge of high standards in house building, home furnishing, and home life.

2—To encourage the building of sound, beautiful single-family houses; and to encourage the reconditioning and remodelling of old houses.

3—To encourage thrift for home ownership, and to spread knowledge of FINANCING THE PURCHASE OR BUILDING OF A HOME.

4—To encourage the FURNISHING of homes economically and in good taste.

5—To supply knowledge of the means of eliminating drudgery and waste of effort in housekeeping.

YOUR family's problem, perhaps, is how to FINANCE the building of a moderate-priced house. More and more, the prospective home-owner, requiring loans up to a maximum of $8,000, is turning to the co-operative bank. Take our advice and, in addition to enjoying the exhibition, go to Huntington Hall on the evening of Wednesday, May 4th, and hear Mr. Henry G. Brigham.

More than 57 per cent. of the families of Massachusetts own their homes. Maintaining this high percentage of individual home-owners is one of the searching tests that now challenge our people.

Better Homes Week is going to be EVERYBODY'S business.

The exhibition in Huntington Hall may be worth a thousand dollars to YOU AND YOUR FAMILY.

And it will all be FREE.

American Once Removed

He Runs Britain's Purse

Winston Churchill, Chancellor of the Exchequer, grandson of Jerome, of the old New York brokerage firm, Travers & Jerome, runs British finance fearlessly, not afraid to tell bad news.

Because of the coal strike and the general strike, Britain has just had her worst financial year, and Churchill tells the nation it will need this coming year more than four billions of dollars more money than Britain ever spent in a peace year.

FACT AND FABLE IN HEROES' LIVES

By DR. FRANK CRANE

TWO steam-roller biographies have recently appeared which are dedicated to the purpose of levelling down any pedestal the Father of Our Country may have heretofore occupied.

They would make the amiable Parson Weems turn over in his grave with horror.

Of course any sensible person knows that no hero, dead for many years, was really anything like what he is pictured to have been. Legends grow up around him. Fact and fable commingle inextricably.

The important thing about the popular conception of a hero is not its representation of the real man, but its mirroring of the ideals of the people.

The fact that the popular conception of a national hero presents a man of finer qualities than the original, is in itself an indication that the people admire and hold praiseworthy high moral qualities.

Greece pictured an Achilles. America a George Washington. The characteristics of the people of the two lands is apparent in the qualities with which they endowed their heroes.

The George Washington of the Fourth of July oration of thirty years ago and of Parson Weems' book may have given a distorted picture of what the living, breathing man was like.

But it did give a vivid representation of the qualities the American people held of highest worth.

Many of the facts in the new biographies are apparently authentic, and have been slighted before.

In the main the facts are valid. It is the emphasis that is to be questioned.

New facts should be brought to light concerning great men, but they should be given proportionate emphasis in a picture of his life.

No man is as good or as bad as he can be pictured by relating actual facts, but without giving the other side its due emphasis.

It is to be questioned whether an age that cherishes each speck of dirt in the life of its heroes has advanced any over an unsophisticated one that pictures its heroes as super-men embodying high ideals.

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By ALINE MICHAELIS.

SING a song of April, dancing on her way; sing of April's bowers, April's sun and showers, all things sweet and gay! Who would not be merry when young April smiles, starting song-birds trilling, setting pulses thrilling with artless wiles? Winter goes forgotten, all his chill and gloom vanished in the glory of fair April's story, April's old-time raptures only April know! bud and bloom! April brings us treasures, brings us wealth untold; sounds of south wind stirring, sound of swift wings whirring as her flowers unfold. April brings us beauty heaped from by-gone days; memories of life's morning, hope's bright hues adorning all Earth's winding ways. April, April, April! Robin's here, and rose; now the spirit captures all the

BOSTON DAY BY DAY

LIKES THRILLS.

H. BRADLEE FENNO, president of Boston Swimming Association, does not fear "man-eating" sharks. He says sharks do not eat live men and will endeavor to prove his theory by swimming in an open-air tank at Woods Hole, containing sharks. MR. FENNO likes thrills and says this stunt should be tried by those suffering from ennui. "The sharks will be more afraid of me than I will of them, however," he concluded.

LONG AGO.

As a boy in his father's arms, PATROLMAN CHARLEY NEWELL in charge of day press bulletins at POLICE HEADQUARTERS, saw GENERAL GRANT with a cigar in his mouth leaving the OLD BOSTON THEATRE in 1868. "I recall the cheers which greeted GRANT," said NEWELL. "He was sworn in as President the following year. I saw him again at the 100th anniversary of the Battle of Lexington."

LUNCHEON.

When the elephants at FRANKLIN PARK ZOO are fed their front right legs are chained to the floor. This always seems strange to visitors, particularly children, until informed by CURATOR E. J. HARKINS that this is done to prevent them from stealing each other's hay, which would lead to fighting. When not feeding they roam at will around the area in which they are housed.

BLOOMS.

TOM LEAVITT, widely known Beverly editor and publisher, has a hobby that has grown with the years. It is the raising of prize-winning dahlias. His dahlia farm at HANOVER is one of the points of interest along the State Road to Plymouth visited each year by many thousands of people, attracted by the wonderful display of blooms.

What Do You Know?

BOSTON'S ORIGINAL KNOWLEDGE TEST

IN the tests now being widely used by schools and offices, a quick and exact response is the thing desired. Train yourself to emphasize this factor by timing your response to these questions.

Rearrange, so that words meaning the same will be paired:

1. degree	artful
2. entomb	clutter
3. insidious	bury
4. litter	cruel
5. perpetual	grade
6. ruthless	continued

Do you know:

7. Who was called the "swamp fox"?
8. What character in one of Shakespeare's plays said,
"I am a man
More sinned against than sinning"?
9. Who was the first Premier of the Russian Soviet Republic?
10. Who followed Roosevelt as President of the U. S.?

Fill each blank:

11. The Taj ——— is the greatest masterpiece of Indian architecture.
12. The practice of pricking indelible patterns in the skin is called ———.
13. The speed of a vessel is reckoned by a device called a ship's ———.

Can you locate the important city by this name?

14. San Antonio
15. Melbourne
16. Cordova
17. Dublin

See tomorrow's paper to verify your results.

Answers to yesterday's test:

1. Germany; 2. Japan; 3. Washington; 4. Ohio; 5. New Jersey; 6. Laura Secord; 7. John Adams; 8. Honore de Balzac; 9. Tecumseh; 10. Louise. Telmanhi; 11. 1492; 12. British Museum; 13. stone coffin; 14. sodium bicarbonate; 15. Mary Roberts Rinehart; 16. Washington Irving 17. Thomas Hardy; 18. Alfred Tennyson.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

LOVE is so beautiful.

I am glad that I have known Love.

It is true that Love never gave me content nor made me happy.

I have never been able to grasp it or feel sure of it.

Often indeed it has hurt me cruelly.

And sometimes, when it has passed on swift feet out into the night, it has left me broken and bankrupt.

But that was not the fault of Love.

That was my own fault.

I did not use Love rightly.

I expected the wrong things of Love.

I tried to turn it into a personal power and possession.

I expected that it would stay with me and I built up my plans accordingly.

I tried to make it a permanent part of my life, as my body and clothes and furniture are a permanent part of my life.

But we can't do that with Love.

We can't do that with any kind of love, whether it be the love of a child or parent, friend, sweetheart, husband or wife.

We can't own Love.

Or bind love to our servitude.

But Love can possess us and we can serve Love.

Love can move within us as the sap moves through the trees.

Love can fall on us as the sunlight falls on the brown earth, quickening it to life.

Love can pass through us as sweet winds pass through a room, cleansing and freshening.

Love can carry us on to far, strange destinies, as the ocean carries a ship.

But always Love will belong to itself and have its own work to do. And always we will belong to ourselves and have our own work to do. And nothing can ever remove the difference between us and the loneliness in us.

If we accept love in that spirit, humbly, gratefully, without haughty domination or selfish demands, it will make life wonderful for us.

But it's hard to accept Love the way.

Love is so beautiful we want to hold it forever.

"Come," we cry to Love, "live with me and make me happy. See, I will build a beautiful house for you and no harm shall ever come to you. There we shall dwell together and forget all the rest of life."

But Love will not live in our little house nor forget all life for our sakes. Sometimes we think it does but the poor, trapped thing inside our house is not Love. It is a weak and frightened changeling, with Love in its heart.

And that must be so, for Love was not made for our personal service any more than the springtime was made for the personal service of one tree or sunlight invented the one plot of ground might be warmed.

Love IS springtime—
Love IS sunlight—
LOVE IS LIFE.

That is why we can never trap it in a little house of selfishness. We do not try. But be glad that you have seen its glory and felt its everlasting urge. That is enough.
